Chinese Air Raid Report Gives Tokyo Scare

BOMB ATTACK RUMOR GIVES ISLAND FRIGHT

Bombing of Formosa In First Raid on Nippon Territory Causes Alarm.

SIRENS SOUND WARNINGS

But 'All Clear' Signals Later Give Terrified Japanese Word Danger's Past.

(By International News Service)

TOKYO — Southern Japan experienced a brief but terrifying air raid scare today with reports that a fleet of new Chinese bombers was speeding across the East China sea on an errand of death and destruction.

At 11:40 a. m. Japanese defense headquarters at Fukuoka on Kyushu Island, southernmost of the main Japanese island group, issued an air raid warning upon receipt of information that 12 Chinese planes had passed over Hangchow, China, en route to western Japan.

Post 'All Clear' Sign.

Late this afternoon, however, an "all clear" signal was sounded for Kyushu Island when the planes failed to appear and Japanese authorities decided they were not coming after all.

The "all clear" notice relieved tense apprehension at Nagasaki, Kyushu's principal port, which has a population of 211,000, Fukuoka and other populous centers on the island.

Still another alarm was sounded on the Japanese Island of Formosa, off the Chinese coast, which was bombed by Chinese aircraft yesterday with casualties reported at more than 40.

At 3 p. m. the Formosan air defense headquarters warned the population Chinese aircraft were approaching. The warning signal later was lifted and it was announced the Chinese planes had avoided Formosa. For a time, officials expressed fears these planes, too, might be flying toward the Japanese mainland.

Six Hours Away.

Military authorities here and on Kyushu Island had estimated it would take the Chinese planes about six hours to reach the island from Hangchow, the Japanese-held Chinese city where they were sighted.

When this period passed and no planes appeared, military authorities decided there was no immediate danger of an air raid.

Today's scare found Japan still stunned by yesterday's assault, the first air raid ever made on her territory, in which eight Chinese planes bombed Taihoku, capital of Formosa and other cities.

This attack caused officials in Tokyo to take immediate measures against a possible aerial attack on the Nipponese capital.

It was admitted officially that 10 persons were killed and between 20 and 30 wounded but in view of government efforts to minimize the results of the Chinese raid it was believed the casualties may prove higher than the official estimate.

U. S. Commission Suspends Prices On All Soft Coal

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The national bituminous coal commission bowed today to challenges of legality of its minimum price structure and formally revoked all price fixing orders, marketing rules and regulations on soft coal.

The revocation is effective at midnight tomorrow. But the commission will begin at once the task of re-establishing prices which it hopes will withstand court attacks. It was estimated this will take approximately four months.

With prices stayed on several fronts by court injunctions, the commissioners voted unanimously late yesterday to scrap the present schedules and start the job over.

The commissioners acted less than 24 hours after major soft coal producers representing fields from which 80 per cent of the bituminous coal is mined and high officials of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers of America urged revocation to avoid delay in stabilization of the industry. The UMWA actively supported the Guffey-Vinson bill which set up the commission to end "cut throat" competition to guarantee cost of production to coal operators.

Austria Waits Schuschnigg Speech Today

Vienna, Tense, Excited, to Hear New Policies Under Nazi Rule.

(By International News Service)

VIENNA —(INS)— Amid tension caused by a Nazi drive against Austria's 250,000 Jews, elaborate preparations were completed today for the eagerly awaited speech of Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg will make before the Austrian parliament tonight.

Broadcasting facilities designed to reach every man and woman in the nation were completed for the speech, which will begin at 7 p. m. and is expected to continue for two hours.

Motion picture houses, restaurants and theaters have installed loud speakers so that their patrons may hear the entire speech from their seats.

Schuschnigg's fatherland front organization will stage mass meetings and demonstrations at public buildings but display of either Austrian or Nazi flags has been forbidden for tonight. Police have completed elaborate precautions to cope with any disorders.

Creates Excitement.

Adding to the excitement, newspapers appearing on the Vienna streets at noon published a French report attributed to the Italian newspaper Avenira D'Italia that Italy would guarantee Austrian independence in return for recognition of her conquest of Ethiopia by Britain and other powers.

The report also stated Germany would receive colonial concessions in return for cancellation of her "annexation" of Austria.

Meanwhile, a powerful but solitary official voice was raised in an attack against the Nazis and their steam-roller tactics in Austria.

Mayor Schmitz of Vienna, cheered by 3,000 members of the fatherland front, told a political rally:

"We will fight for Austria's independence to the last drop of blood. Austria always was a German state but that does not mean we are of pan-German spirit. I reject the Utopians who believe it possible to combine 90,000,000 Germans into one state.

"A regime hostile to the church will not last. The Catholic church proved itself stronger than the Roman leader. Dictatorship cannot be permanent.

Steel Mag Says Operations To Improve Substantially.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — A. J. Hain, managing editor of the magazine Steel, said today "the best opinion in the industry" is that this year's steelworks operations will average about 50 per cent of capacity, contrasting with 72.3 in 1937.

Steel circles generally expressed moderate optimism about the immediate furore of the industry, which is running at slightly better than 30 per cent of capacity.

Cited as cheering factors by several sources were:

An expected seasonal upturn in the automobile industry, spring-induced farm implement and fence buying, orders expected from railroads if they are granted freight rate increases, and the stabilizing reaffirmation of prices for the second quarter.

One source in close touch with a leading producer held that there would be "substantial improvement" in two or three weeks.

New Orleans Set For Gala Mardi Gras

Mardi Gras crowd in Canal street

Carnis Vale'—Hail to the carnival!—echoes across New Orleans these days as citizens prepare to celebrate another gala Mardi Gras. On March 1, Shrove Tuesday, the ancient festival will reach its height, as cares are forgotten and the old French city abandons itself to hilarious buffoonery. The festival, which dates back 5,000 years, was made a tradition, and it was natural that New Orleans should cary it on in this country. The highlight of the Mardi Gras season, which is now on, will be the giant parade next Tuesday. The pictures above show typical Mardi Gras scenes.

COMPILES DATA ON CROSSINGS

Mayor Pushes Campaign for Full-time Protection at Five Grades.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter had before him today figures to show that 1,573 vehicles and 439 pedestrians had crossed unguarded railroad tracks at five street intersections last night in his campaign to obtain full-time protection at those crossings.

He made public today figures compiled at all five crossings last night, during the hours the crossings are without watchmen or gate protection.

More than half of the traffic, both vehicular and pedestrian, was recorded at the North Main street crossing of the B. & O. railroad between the hours of 7 p. m. and 7 a. m. today. The count there was 816 passenger cars, 49 trucks, 14 buses and 202 pedestrians.

At only one crossing, that of the Pennsylvania at North Diamond street, was a check of the number of trains kept. That crossing is unguarded between 10:30 p. m. and 5.30 a. m. During that time, 22 trains passed, while the crossing was used by 84 passenger cars, 4 trucks and 82 pedestrians.

Mayor Hunter said he would submit his figures to W. E. Harrington, representative of the state utilities commission Monday, when Harrington comes to Mans-

GERMANY TO END PASTOR'S TRIAL

Verdict Expected Monday for 'Disobedient' Minister.

BERLIN — (AP) — Prosecution and defense arguments in the trial of Rev. Martin Niemoeller begin today, with indications a verdict will be announced Monday.

Friends of the fiery Protestant pastor, who is accused of disrespect and disobedience of the Nazi regime, expected he would be let off with a few months' imprisonment, which he already has served while awaiting trial.

They saw indications, however, that a campaign was under way to destroy Niemoeller's influence.

Council Meets, Sets Stage For Showdown On Sewage Issue

In one of the shortest sessions in years, city council in a special meeting last night set the stage for a showdown on the sewage plant controversy for March 1, its next regular meeting.

Without a single word of comment, the city fathers gave three pieces of legislation dealing with the supervision and operation of the sewage plant a second reading. The meeting lasted 15 minutes.

The three measures received their first reading last Friday after a pre-meeting caucus revealed that council was split, 4-4 on the question of again hiring a plant operator without previous experience. Councilman-at-Large George Berg, president pro-tem, presided in the absence of Council President Karl Troll, reducing the ranks of the voting members to eight.

The sewage legislation which will come up for passage after the third reading next week, needs only a majority vote to pass.

The legislation includes the renewal of an ordinance which expires March 8 creating the positions of the sewage plant staff and fixing their salaries, another authorizes the employment of a

Hoosiers Whoop It up For McNutt, 'Favorite Son'

Philippine High Commissioner's Not Presidential Candidate—Yet, But Bandwagon's All Ready.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—When Indiana has a party, my friends, it's a party, the like of which you never saw before.

And so it was with the super super colossal party the Hoosiers held for their favorite son, Paul V. McNutt, former governor, silver haired and handsome high commissioner of the Philippines for these United States.

McNutt isn't a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1940—oh, no—not unless he gets it. It is a matter of no concern to the Indiana political chieftain. But if he does, the bandwagon is already constructed, with seats for some four thousand souls, and handles for as many more.

Greeted by 4,000.

Cosmopolitan Washington was chosen for the unveiling of this bandwagon, a gilt edged affair, draped in flags and dripping with good fellowship, wine and song.

And the barkers—Paul V. McNutt himself, with handsome Sherman Minton, Democratic senator from Indiana and the lovely Mrs. Minton standing at his side. What matter if at 7 o'clock, when according to the invitations they could leave, they were tired? Hadn't some four thousand fervent McNutt well wishers filed by and pumped their hands? They had.

Reporters were there galore, but

TRAGIC END

Mansfield Woman Sees Kin Killed By Truck.

The winter vacation in Florida for Mrs. Catherine Hahn, 136 East Second street, ended in tragedy last night at Tampa when her brother-in-law, Ray Dick, 54, of Columbus, was killed when struck by a truck, according to a United Press dispatch to The News-Journal today.

Mrs. Hahn, her sister and brother-in-law left Columbus last month for several weeks in Florida. The three were fishing last night from a bridge over the Manatee river when a truck driven by Frank Ball, Ruskin, Fla., struck the Columbus couple, the United Press reported.

Dick was knocked into the river and Mrs. Dick was seriously injured. Mrs. Hahn witnessed the accident from the other end of the bridge. Although the driver of the truck fled, he was picked up later when police found his truck with a broken headlight and shreds of torn clothing on the truck. He was being held for questioning by police today.

RUSH BOATS TO FLOOD VICTIMS

Rescue Crews Work Feverishly As Arkansas Levee Breaks.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(INS)— While workers fought desperately to save the little town of Fulton from the flood waters of the raging Red river, rescue boats pushed through the lowlands near Garland City, 20 miles south of Fulton, to rescue residents endangered by a break in a main levee.

The levee, one of the strongest in the section broke last night, according to flood officials here, sending flood waters over a wide and populous farming area and catching both rescue crews and residents of the section by surprise.

No loss of life in the section was anticipated, however, as the flood section is flat land and the water was rising very slowly in the overflow area.

Weatherman Insists More Snow's On Way For Tonight.

The weatherman apparently had his months mixed today, with intermittent snow flurries and periods of sunshine bringing a typical March day to Mansfield.

A half-inch of snow which fell last night and early today disappeared by noon under bright sunshine and rising temperatures. But the forecast predicted more snow flurries and colder for tonight, followed by cloudy weather and moderate temperatures Friday. From a low of 25 degrees above zero last night the mercury rose to 31 at noon today.

8 CONTRACTS LET BY CITY TOTAL $15,000

Board of Control Announces Business 'Split' Among Low Bidders.

BUY MATERIALS, SUPPLIES

Mansfield Firm Gets Asphalt And Road Oil Contract for Third Year.

Eight contracts for materials and supplies totaling approximately $15,000 have been awarded by the city board of control, it was announced today by Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert.

All contracts were awarded to the lowest bidders, and where several or more bids were identical, Mayor Claude M. Hunter said the contracts were distributed among the various firms to "divide up the city business."

Lone Bid on Asphalt.

For the third consecutive year, the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, the lone bidder on asphalt and road oil, was awarded the contract to supply the city with 5,000 gallons of asphalt cut-back at 10½ cents a gallon, seven cars, about 56,000 gallons, of road oil at 7¾ cents a gallon and 100 tons of asphalt filler at $21 a ton.

The contract, which totaled nearly $8,000 was the largest to be awarded any firm, and calls for road oil, which is approximately a quarter cent cheaper per gallon this year, applied. City records show that the street department last year used 70,452 gallons of the oil and paid the firm $5,629.

Let Coal, Paint Contracts.

A contract for three cars of coal to be delivered to the garbage department, went to the Funk Coal company, the only bidder, for $480, or $4.01 a ton.

The Martin Hardware company, lowest of three bidders was awarded the contract totaling $893 for 400 gallons of white traffic paint at $1.30 a gallon, and 400 gallons of orange traffic paint at 93 cents a gallon. This was approximately five cents a gallon under the price submitted by the Getz Hardware company and 30 cents per gallon less than the proposal submitted by Schmidt and Peat Hardware company.

A contract totaling $2,364 was awarded the Purdy construction company, lowest of seven bidders on the various grades of sand and gravel to be delivered to the street department. The winning bid was $1.19 a ton for 20 cars of grade "A" No. 7 gravel, $1.17

LUMBER YARD DESTROYED IN $30,000 BLAZE

Main Building and 2 Storage Sheds of Willard Concern Wiped Out By Fire.

(By Staff Correspondent)

WILLARD—Fire of undetermined origin last night and early today destroyed the main building and two large storage sheds of the Beelman Manufacturing and Lumber company with an estimated loss of $30,000.

The blaze, which broke out around 9 p. m. Wednesday, swept through the company's business offices, a large planing mill and several outsheds and threatened surrounding buildings before it was brought under control by 25-member volunteer fire company under the direction of Fire Chief L. C. Williams.

Pour Water on Ruins.

Firemen today were still throwing streams of water into the smoldering ruins and other sheds filled with lumber.

The fire, fed by a paint stock estimated at $2,000, a large supply of painters' equipment and lumber stored in the main building, spread quickly and by midnight had gained such headway it was impossible to save any of the buildings in its direct path, Chief Williams said.

One shed which the two-truck fire company saved contained some of the finest seasoned hardwood lumber in this vicinity, a company official said

A Baltimore and Ohio railroad lumber yard, located next to the Beelman company yards, in which an estimated $10,000 worth of lumber was stored, was threatened, but firemen were able to save the structure by keeping a constant stream of water on the walls. B. & O. switch engines moved all box cars from the immediate vicinity of the fire.

The firemen were summoned by neighbors. It appeared for a time that the blaze had been brought under control when the roof of the main building suddenly caught fire and by midnight the walls had caved in.

Opposition Looms In County School Board On Vaccinations

The possibility of a lively session of the Richland county board of education, when it meets Saturday to act on the compulsory vaccination of children of pre-school age against smallpox, was seen today.

At least one member of the five-member board expressed disapproval of the idea and another said he would have to "know more about the plan" before he would give it his vote.

County Superintendent Boyd Robinson said he would submit the proposal to the board in an attempt to get the county's rural schools in line with Mansfield schools in the campaign against smallpox outbreaks. The Mansfield school board ordered compulsory pre-school vaccination, effective Sept. 1, at a meeting Monday night.

Of the three members of the county board who could be reached today, only C. G. Tugend, of Worthington township, said he was opposed to the plan

"This vaccination business sounds a little like a racket to me," he said, "and I think closing all public meetings when a case of smallpox appears would do more than vaccination to head off an epidemic."

"If I can be convinced that vaccination of children under six years old will not cause undue ill effects, I'll be for the compulsory vaccination plan," Floyd W. Hunt, member of the board from Lucas, asserted.

Neil Robinson, veteran member of the board from Madison township, said briefly "I'm for it." Lewis Rinehart, of Sandusky township, and John Snook, Mifflin township, could not be reached for comment.

Defense Hits Eligibility of Judge to Preside; Committee Declines to Attend.

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS —(INS)— The senate investigating committee recessed until 3 p. m. today after hearing Harry H. Sparks, bituminous engineer in the state highway department, testify that an average of $2,000,000 was wasted in two years in the purchase of bituminous hot and cold road mixes.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—Gov. Martin L. Davey met his accuser, Lee Bradley, face to face today in a packed East Cleveland courtroom where the perjury hearing for Bradley was continued until Saturday after a flareup over the position of Parker Fulton, Gov. Davey's counsel, in the case, and an indication the defense would question the right of Judge Stanton Addams to hear the case.

Grants Continuance.

Judge Addams granted the two-day continuance over objections of Bradley's attorneys, who sought a 10-day delay. The state will present its evidence Saturday, Judge Addams ruled, and after that the defense will have "a week or 10 days" to prepare to cross-examine witnesses and introduce testimony.

The hearing—called on a perjury warrant sworn to by Governor Davey after Bradley told the senate investigating committee that Davey had dealt with utilities and motor companies for contributions to his 1934 campaign—will determine whether Bradley is to be bound over to the grand jury.

Bradley, charged by the executive with uttering falsehoods in testimony asserting Davey dealt with motor companies and utilities in his 1934 campaign, entered the courtroom a few minutes before the governor. They barely exchanged glances when the governor entered.

Appear With Davey.

Governor Davey was accompanied by his executive secretary, John Caren; his counsel, Charles Druggan and Fulton; his brother, Paul Davey; and Francis W. Poulson, chairman of th Democratic state committee, as well as three

DEPICTS LIFE IN BOOM DAYS IN NORTHWEST

A novel of the boom days in the Pacific Northwest depicts the life of Dr. Jim Winforth, a doctor who keeps the oath of silence which every doctor takes never to reveal those things "in the lives of men" which are not to be spoken. Allan Hart writes of a frontier city where wealth rolled in from lumber and railroads faster than people could spend it. "In The Lives of Men" is one of the new fiction books this week at Public library.

"Babies Without Tails" is the intriguing title of Walter Duranty's books which is a collection of short stories about Russian life since the revolution. The title comes from the first story in the book which shows how a young Red soldier foils the power of an old village sorcerer who has threatened that his wife shall bear a child covered with long hair and having a tail, unless she is paid a fee to forestall such a catastrophe.

"Life and Miss Celeste" by Florence Glass Palmer is a novel which brings to fiction a new and engaging personality, Miss Celeste.

Four other books complete the fiction additions for the week. They are "Golden Carlotta" by Stebbins; "Outlaw of Eagle's Nest," Field; "Still Is The Summer Night, Derleth, and "They Who Have" by Lambert.

Variety on Non-Fiction.

Three new non-fiction books, written from the purely personal standpoint, promise to be interesting reading. Negley Farson, whose "Way Of A Transgressor" was popular, has written another. It is "Transgressor In The Tropics," and gives the reader a vivid picture of life in South America, including information about the social development of the people.

Lillian T. Mowers writes of her life as a "Journalist Wife." Edgar Ansel Mower, Paris correspondent of the Chicago Daily News when she married him, was assigned to Italy during the World war and since has covered major European events. Everywhere she has accompanied him and assisted him. From this book there emerges a picture of the world on the threshold of a new epoch.

The hairbreath escapes of a rubber planter in the Malay peninsula, make "Pahang" by Willard C. Bush an exciting book. Called "Mad Yank" by Englishmen in Singapore, this young American tried his hand as manager of a rubber plantation, and because of his courageous pioneer spirit he made good.

The new books in line with the subject of next Monday night's lecture in the Institute of International Understanding, "The Rise of Nationalism in China," are "The Far East in World Politics" by Geoffrey Francis Hudson and "The 20th Century in the Far East" by Percy Horace Braund Kent. The first is a readable account of the events of the last 100 years, explaining their bearing on the present situation. The second is a summary of recent affairs by the senior member of the English Bar practicing in China.

Other non-fiction this week includes:

"Airplane and Engine Maintenance" by Brimm and Boggess; "Drive and Live." Bayson; "Procedure Handbook of Arc Welding, Design and Practice" 5th edition; "One Hundred Masterpieces of Painting," Witt; "Violinist's Manual," Gosling; "Talking Pictures," Kresling; "Movies Come From America," Seldes; "Strategy and Tactics in Chess," Euwe; "Selected Poems," Snow; "A Letter From Pontus," Mansfield; "Collected Plays," Yeats; "Men of Concord," Thoreau; "George Washington Himself," Fitzpatrick; and "American Nicknames" by Shankle. INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 28

Deduction for Losses Other Than From Sale or Exchange of Capital Assets.

Deductions for losses are divided into four classes, and to be allowed must follow closely the wording of the income-tax law. Losses are deductible if incurred (1) in the taxpayer's trade, business, or profession; (2) in any transaction entered into for profit; (3) from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualties, or from theft; and (4) from wagering transactions.

Business losses result, usually, from the purchase and sale of merchandise. Such losses usually are ascertained by means of inventories, which are required whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue their use is necessary to determine the income of any taxpayer.

The term "transaction entered into for profit" means any kind of business proposition. For example, a taxpayer purchases an automobile to be used solely for business purposes, and which is sold for a loss. As this is a business proposition from start to finish, the loss is deductible, subject to the limitations of section 117. But if he had purchased the automobile to be used for pleasure or convenience, the deduction would not be allowed; it was not a transaction entered into for profit.

A loss sustained in the theft of an automobile purchased for pleasure is deductible, as it falls in class 3. If, because of faulty driving but not of "willful negligence," an automobile maintained for pleasure is damaged, the taxpayer may claim the loss sustained, as it comes within the meaning of the word "casualty." Where damages result from the faulty driving of an automobile with which the automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned to the taxpayer is likewise deductible.

Losses from wagering transactions, whether legal or illegal, are deductible only to the extent of gains from such tranactions. The excess of such losses over the gains is not deductible.

All losses are deductible only to the extent to which they are not compensated by insurance or otherwise.

PICTURES PAINTED BY HITLER WHEN A YOUTH SELL FOR $400

Although they are simple water colors, of uncertain perspective, showing rather conventional street scenes, the asking price for the few still available is about $400 each.

Art dealers say der fuehrer produced 20 pictures at most in the two years when he eked out an existence by selling his paintings for a few pennies each. He was then about 20 years old and lack of artistic talent barred his entry to the Vienna academy of art.

The dealers say that it is hardly the artistic value that makes the paintings sought after; it is the Hitler autograph.

The market is kept strong by sales to Germans living in Vienna to whom two motives are attributed:

1. Interest in the early days of der fuehrer's life;

2. A desire to get the pictures out of circulation.

A German journalist and an official of the Reich are the two most avid collectors. Both send whatever Hitler pictures they can find back to Germany.

Faked Hitlers have appeared in Vienna, and at least one painter was charged with attempts to swindle by passing them for originals.

The Viennese seemingly cared little for the pictures when they first appeared. More popular were his caricatures of Vienna types—coachmen, street hawkers and the like. But even these brought little more than the price of a cup of coffee and a cheap bed for the night.

Now, one family in Hitler's birthplace, Braunau Am inn, has two of his earliest artistic efforts which they refuse to sell at any price. They are copies of the crude lithographs that were then popular in Austria.

BOOSTS PRICE OF AIR FOR CARS

London Garages Charge 12 Cents For Blowing Up Tires.

LONDON—(AP)—The air is no longer free in some parts of England. A number of garagemen have decided to charge 12 cents every time they have to inflate a motorist's tires.

This and such other services as filling radiators and topping up batteries are performed free by most filling stations which depend on good will for much of their business.

But the garagemen say the services cost them several pounds a week in time and they are disturbed over "undercutting" by filling stations.

SEEK GOLD ON ARMADA VESSEL

Searchers to Hunt Galleon Sunk 400 Years Ago Near Isle of Mull.

LONDON—(U.P.)—A new attempt is to be made to raise from the sea the millions of gold coins, minted when Philip of Spain was at war with Elizabeth of England, which are reputed to lie on the bottom of Tobermory Harbor, Isle of Mull.

The coins were in a galleon which was sunk by an angry Highlander who could not get the money for goods he had supplied.

Nearly 400 years have passed since the galleon Duke Florenca set sail with the mighty Armada, carrying 30,000,000 ducats. After the Armada met with defeat in the English channel, a gale sprang up which swept a number of the ships up St George's Channel and the Irish sea to the west coast of Scotland and the barren rosky strands of Northern Ireland.

The Duque Florenca reached the Isle of Mull. Officers ordered stores from the islanders, but refused payment. As the galleon was putting out to sea she was blown up by a daring Highlander who had got aboard and swam ashore after lighting the fuse.

Now Herr Van Wiener, Dutch engineer and inventor of a new type of diving apparatus, has obtained permission to try to raise the cargo.

For hundreds of years the romance of Treasure Trove has lured people to seek the gold basing all their hopes on an old story that a Greenock diver employed by the Earl of Argyll found in 1665 "one paper of Lattin Extractes out of the Spanish records that there were 30,000,000 of cash on board the said ship, and it tells it lay under ye Sell of the Gunroome."

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

Once in a great while, not as often as one would like a book is written that is "perfect." "Seven Simeons" is such a book. Boris Artzybasheff wrote the story and illustrated it, and, in the opinion of many librarians, it is the finest book for children, published in 1937.

King Douda was young, rich, wise, and good looking. But he just couldn't find a wife. The sailors had told him of a beautiful princess who lived in a far-away land, but it would take 10 years to reach her! One day, when the king was out hunting, he met the "Seven Simeons"—brothers. Besides tilling the soil, they each had some useful trade. Each Simeon tells the king what his trade is, and when they are finished, they journey back to the palace with him. He charges them to go and find the beautiful princess and to bring her back to be his wife.

WHY do most women prefer Country Club Apple Butter? Because it is just right. And that's because Country Club Apple Butter is made from sound, hand-picked apples (no windfalls) blended with just the right amount of cinnamon, and all-spice, then slow-cooked the good, old-fashioned way. That's why it's extra rich, extra smooth. Why it tastes like home made. So if you want really down-on-the-farm flavor, "put up" a dozen or so cans in your pantry today.

LOUIS CALLS SHOT AS HE KAYOES NATHAN MANN IN THIRD

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(INS Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—They're talking today about what Joe Louis is going to do to his next victim, but I'm old fashioned and so I have to go back and relate what happened to the last one. The last one was Mr. Nathan Mann of New Haven, Conn., and the details were rather pitiful.

Before a capacity house of 19,000, Louis knocked out Mann in 1:56 of the third round of their scheduled 15-round joust at Madison Square Garden last night. It was as brief and as formal as that.

Mann had a pair of hands that were always a split second behind the champion's — and therefore the result was ordained.

Twice in the first round Mann nailed Louis with overhand rights, but Joseph giggled these punches off and came back with successive rallies which clearly indicated he was about to score a decisive victory.

19,490 SEE LOUIS WIN

NEW YORK — (INS)—Paid attendance at the Louis-Mann heavyweight championship bout at Madison Square Garden last night was 19,490, one of the greatest crowds ever to witness an indoor bout here. The gross receipts reached $111,698 and the net $95,314.

Mann was down four times all told. Biding his time until he could find an opening, Louis finally broke through the challenger's guard just before the end of the second round with a bomb-like left to the jaw that put Nathan right in the middle of Queer street.

He took a count of nine. Louis was all set to finish him, but the bell came to Mann's rescue.

From that point on, however, the Connecticut fighter never knew what hit him. In the third round, he hit the deck for counts of one and three before Joe's left finally ended the slaughter. Too dazed to take the customary count of nine, he revealed later he didn't even know he had been on the axminster.

* * *

A LA BABE RUTH in pointing to the bleachers to inform the Chicago Cubs where he was going to deposit his next home run, Louis called his shot to a nicety. He had promised John Roxborough, one of his handlers, that he would wind up the business in the third session so that John could make a train connection for Chicago.

Joseph went through on schedule right to the dot. At the finish the game Nathan was on his knees near Louis' corner, paralyzed by a final and fearful left hook to the jaw. The bewildered, mute look in his eyes told only too plainly that his fighting wits were scrambled beyond repair. A stream of blood ran down from his nostrils and mouth onto his chest.

The surprising features of the fight were Mann's almost unbelievable gameness and the nonchalance with which Louis weathered the challenger's Sunday punch. Mann, in fact, actually won the first round. His most telling punch was a steaming right which landed flush on Joseph's button.

That punch carried the hopes and the cash money of thousands of the challenger's Connecticut admirers who came to town to cover those juicy 5 to 1 odds. It made Joe's knees sag a little, but that was all. And from that time on, Louis took command in no uncertain manner.

It was the champion's second successful defense of his title in eight months. And in view of the devastating power he uncovered last night, some of the boys were predicting today that he will turn the tables on the Herr Schmeling and knock out the German in their June fight.

* * *

JOE'S handlers decided today however, to take on at least one more "warmup" opponent before the Schmeling fight. Nate Lewis, who pilots Harry Thomas—the Minnesota left-field swinger who served as a fistic guinea pig for Schmeling — contracted with Promoter Mike Jacobs and revealed terms for a Thomas-Louis meeting in the Chicago stadium on April 1 pot with Joe's approval. This bout may be sealed officially today.

Supplies Fall, too

By CHARLES MARTIN

TWELVE straight victories! That is the impressive record of the undefeated Yuncker Sports today.

Last night the fast-stepping Yuncker outfit placed its brilliant record on the block against the classy Athletic Supplies of Columbus and came through with a well-earned 36 to 34 decision before a disappointing crowd on the Mansfield high planks.

Miner's Basket Wins.

Jack Miner, flashy guard, provided the winning points by sinking a clever side shot in the last minute with the score deadlocked at 34-all.

The Sports never held the lead until the last minute. Trailing, 18 to 12, at the intermission, the Yuncker club, fighting desperately to protect its unblemished record, remained in the thick of the fight to come out on the long end of he score.

With Harold "Cookie" Cunningham, erstwhile Ohio State star, performing in spectacular fashion, the Supplies hopped into the lead in the opening minute and for a while it looked as though the Yuncker club had finally met its Waterloo.

Cunningham, who coaches, the Supplies, put on a personal demonstration of scoring, garnering 14 of the 18 points made by the Athletic club in the opening half.

The Supplies increased their lead to a 20 to 12 count in the last period before the Sports began to click. And then midway in the chapter they climbed within one point of the invaders' lead.

From there on in it was anybody's game.

Denny Elliott, whose clever floor work was an outstanding feature of the contest, scored a bucket to give the Supplies a three-point lead with three minutes to go.

But Al Stickler, who paced the Sports with 15 points, slipped in an overhand shot, and after Battelmas scored on a scoop. Miner added a bucket and Stickler then dropped in a charity toss to knot the score. With less than 30 seconds to go Miner dribbled down the side of the court and sank the winning goal.

Cunningham set the individual pace with 16 points, while Tom Farrell added 10 points to the winners' cause.

Elks Win Again.

The Elks' club and Westinghouse Electric combines staged a thrilling see-saw battle in the preliminary attraction in which the Elks emerged with a 33 to 26 decision.

The Elks led by Freddie Lewis, staged a thrilling last-half rally to win. The Elkmen, trailing 17 to 12, at the intermission scored 21 points in the second half while holding Vern Jones' Electrics to nine.

The Westies, battling to score their first victory of the season over their dangerous opponents, opened up with a rush but were unable to keep up the pace. They clung unto the lead until midway in the last chapter.

Lewis scored nine points to lead the Elks and Inwood Smith who was elected on fouls in the last half, topped the Electrics with seven.

Michaels Rolls 652 Total to Set Individual Pace In Weekly Matches.

Henry Michaels of the Roma Lunch team set the individual pace in the City Class A league matches at the Meder alleys last night.

Michaels came through with a string of 255, 209 and 188, to reach the 652 figures. He led the Lunchmen to a 2729 total, but it was good for only one victory over the leading Miller Oldsmobiles, who toppled 2733 sticks.

The second place Metcalf Pure Oils led the team scoring with a 2851 total. Farrell Hipp paced the Oils with a 630 as they took two tilts from the Meder Recreation, which, led by Jones' 631, rolled a 2791.

Louis Kayoes Mann in Third In Tune-up for Bout With Schmeling.

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK—(AP)—Standing up courageously and slugging it out like a basket of wildcats with Joe Louis still is one of the surest methods known of getting knocked all out of shape, as Natie Mann was telling his Connecticut friends between cut lips today.

Natie wanted to know, and he found out to the lasting satisfaction of himself and 19,490 paying fans in the garden last night, when the brown-skinned champion gave him a sickening beating and left him on the floor, with not a thought in his head, in 1:56 of the third round.

Champ Looks Great.

Making the second defense of the title he won only last June, the big colored boy looked great as he cut down and tore apart the farmer kid who thought he could slug it out with him.

Unmarked, not even blowing from the brief workout, Louis sat later and said he would like one more tune-up before his encounter with Max Schmeling in June. Promoter Mike Jacobs promised to pick an opponent for Joe today, and the betting was it would be Harry Thomas, at Chicago, with Jimmy Adamick an outside choice.

There are easier ways of making money than being on the receiving end of the brutal lefts and rights that spilled Mann four times last night and left his brain addled for 20 minutes after he was counted out.

"If I had it to do over again, I'd never try to fight him like that," said Natie. "I guess he's a terrible hitter. I didn't know a thing after he tagged me the first time early in the second round."

It was a left hook at Natie's jaw. He didn't go down, only drifted against the ropes for a space, and neither Louis nor the yelling crowd knew Natie was out on his feet. He was knocked down for a nine count later in the round and in the fatal third fought Louis all over the ring and was down three times without having a glimmer of what was going on. Mann never had been knocked out before.

Louis Stock Rises.

On the strength of his superb showing against a fighter who, admittedly, was made to his order, Louis's stock probably will rise sharply against Schmeling. The champ has regained the old fire that was sadly lacking when Max pinned his ears back two summers ago. It is highly probable, even, that he will enter the ring a favorite over the man who nailed him.

CLAYBOURN, DAVIS MEET

Tangle in Headline Bout on Monday's Mat Card. At Armory.

Jack Claybourn, popular colored grappling star of Chicago, and Sterling Davis, a Texas roughneck, will collide in the feature bout on Monday's Quality club show at the Armory.

The colored race has seldom contributed as likeable a man to the sporting world as "Gentleman Jack" Claybourn. He rates right along with Jesse Owens and Joe Louis, another sensational pair of colored boys who made good in the hard world of athletics.

Sterling Davis has anything but sterling qualities. This young man of the silver-streaked hair is one of the harshest winds that ever blew out of the Lone Star state. Using every means known to the game, he has pounded his way through an amazing number of rivals. When he is beaten, it is generally through disqualifications.

Claybourn may be the boy to stop Davis. Although Jack is a clean, scientific wrestler, he is not adverse of roughing things up a bit when the occasion demands.

TIME TO WAKE UP MR. BASEBALL FAN

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

IT IS ABOUT TIME that Mansfield awakens to the fact that it may not be represented in the Ohio State league this year.

The Boston Red Sox, who operated a championship team in the city last year, have not indicated that they will be back, and Mansfield has done nothing to encourage their return.

It looks right now as though Mansfield is waiting for Boston to make the first move. This stand may prove fatal to the city's chances to be represented in professional baseball again next summer.

The Boston club held the bag last year, and, apparently, it is not anxious to do it again. Mansfield could never hope to get another agreement as it had last year with the Red Sox or any other major league club. Boston took all the responsibilities. But Mansfield could probably get a better tie-up than any club in the Ohio State league if it spoke up.

The officials of the Red Sox have remained quiet, but it is not difficult to see that if they return they want more co-operation than they received last year from the city.

It appears that it will be necessary to erect a ball park to obtain another tie-up with the American league club.

But where is Mansfield going to get a ball park? They don't grow on trees. This city certainly won't get a ball park unless it makes an effort in that direction.

* * *

THE TIME is ripe for action. The season opens within a few months. But instead of trying to tempt the Red Sox with some tangible plans, Mansfield is waiting for Boston to do something.

Remember, folk, the Red Sox can get along without Mansfield. They don't need the city to round out a strong farm system; at least, not at the price it cost last year.

But Mansfield can use the Boston club if it hopes to continue in organized baseball at a bargain price.

Time to wake up, baseball fans.

TILDEN NO. 1 NET CHOICE

BILL TILDEN

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor
(Fourth In A Series Of Six Articles.)

OUR selections for the lawn tennis all-time "Hall of Fame" reflect its international character to a greater extent than our selections in any other sport. Davis cup history is linked inseparably with the top ten, comprising three players each from the U. S. and England, two each from France and Australasia.

Unquestionably Big Bill Tilden belongs at the head of the honor class. Alone among the world's racquet-wielding greats, his supremacy has the backing of experts of the old school as well as of all cities of this generation. He won more major championships, achieved greater Davis cup fame, and retained a larger measure of competitive skill over a longer space of time than any other player ever did.

Tilden reached the top during the period generally conceded to involve the fastest pace and toughest competition in lawn tennis history. He was American singles king six years in a row and seven times altogether, victor at Wimbledon in 1920-21 and again in 1930. He won 21 out of 28 Davis cup challenge round matches in singles and doubles, a record that is even greater than the figures themselves indicate. He is in his 10's now, a pro veteran, but still no pushover.

Big Bill's partner in the Davis cup wars, William M. (Little Bill) Johnston, fills the No. 2 spot, notwithstanding the feeling of some old-timers that Hugh Laurence Doherty, of England's famous Doherty brothers, is the logical runner-up to Tilden. Johnston, we feel, rates it for the simple reason that he alone was able to challenge Tilden seriously. In Big Bill's prime, and that in any other era the diminutive Californian would have dominated the field. It was Little Bill's tough luck to spend the greatest years in the shadow of the greatest player of all time.

The complete tennis "Hall of Fame": 1. William Tatem Tilden, II, U. S.; 2. William M. Johnston, U. S.; 3. Hugh Laurence Doherty, England; 4. Norman Everard Brookes, Australia; 5. Reginald F. Doherty, England; 6. Frederick John Perry, England; 7. Jean Lacoste, France; 8. Henry Cochet, France; 9. Anthony F. Wilding, New Zealand; 10. Maurice E. McLoughlin, U. S.

Many Out-of-Town Fighters On Friendly House Program

BOXING talent from four surrounding towns will invade Mansfield Monday night to exhibit leather pushing ability on the Friendly House amateur card.

Crestline, Galion, Willard and Ashland have filed entries with Mike Wentz and Johnny Villela, matchmakers, Ashland topping the list with five boxers.

Principal among the Ashlanders to participate are the McKinley brothers, Ernie, George and Melvin. All three have appeared on previous Friendly House shows with creditable performances.

Frank Dolce and Phil Ganni will carry the Crestline colors on the program, while representatives from Galion include Bob Shupp, heavyweight, Fred Clinite, 154, Bob Shaw, 142, and Joe McAdams, 126. Al Kelly will be the lone Willard representative.

Ducats for the card can be secured at the Gladhand, Hunt's News Depot, Frank's night club, Rex Billiards, Corner Lunch and the Friendly House.

TYGERS TO PLAY ALUMNI ON HOME PLANKS FRIDAY

UNABLE to bring Willard to the city to play a postponed game because of schedule interference, the cagers of Mansfield high school will meet the Alumni team on the home planks Friday night.

The Alumni team, which is being organized by Noel Morgan, a star of last season's club, will include Al Stickler, Freddy Lewis, Russ Hoff and a number of other former Tyger favorites.

A preliminary game between the crack Mansfield high reserve team and the Crestline reserves, recent winners over the junior Tygers, is also scheduled.

Continue To Dominate League Race

Basketballers of the First Lutheran and First M. E. continue to dominate the race in the church Class A league.

The Lutherans smothered the Episcopal club, 29 to 14, and the Methodist walloped the Baptists, 33 to 21, in the weekly tilts at the Y. M. C. A. last night to remain in a tie for the lead.

First Lutheran ran into trouble against the Episcopals. Trailing, 11 to 8 at the half, the co-leaders rallied to grab a 17 to 12 advantage in the third stanza and then won going away. B. Martin and Reichert led the scoring with seven points apiece.

The Methodists waded through the lowly Baptist without any difficulty. They blanked the losers in the opening chapter to take a commanding, 10 to 0, lead. At halftime First M. E. led, 18 to 7. Rush topped the Methodist with eight points.

Mayflower edged St. John's, 37 to 35. St. Paul's defeated Temple Emanuel, 25 to 23, and Central M. E. won on a forfeit over the United Presbyterians in the other melees.

Bee's Long Islanders Play Toledo Tonight

Clair Bee, basketball's "Cinderella man" and the Long Island University quintet that made the court sport a "money game" in the east, invade the state tonight for a clash with the University of Toledo at Toledo.

Bee, once a member of the coaching staff at Mansfield High school, went to Long Island six years ago and the school's phenomenal rise as a basketball power dates from that time. Over a stretch of six seasons Bee's teams have won 150 games and lost only 24.

Eddie Lore Can Set New Record Friday

If Eddie Lore can score 10 points Friday night, he will establish a new individual scoring record in the N. C. O. conference.

And, oddly enough, Lore will be seeking the new record against the school with which the title-holder performed.

Lore will lead Mt. Vernon to Ashland Friday night carrying a total of 132 points, nine short of the record of 142 set by Bob Sprague last year.

Ashland players will naturally attempt to protect Sprague's record, but Lore has been unstoppable this season, and the A's will be doing something no other team has accomplished if it can hold the Jacket star.

Galion plays at Bucyrus and Marion at Shelby in the other games Friday night. All of the teams will close their conference schedules Friday except Bucyrus and Galion, which are expected to play their postponed game Monday.

Leads Individuals With 192 Game Mark.

Packing an average of 192 pins, Cliff Forsythe of the Q Billiards tops the Commercial B bowling league figures released by Secretary Roy Vaugh today.

Ex Schaus, also of the Q Billiards, and E. D. Funston of the Untiet Insurance club are tied for second place in the averages with 188's. Ed Henrich of the insurance team and Harold LeMunyon of the Willis Billiards follow with 185 averages.

The Q Billiards top the team averages with a 907 mark, six pins higher than the average held by the Untiet team, league leader. Individual leaders follow:

PROTECTS MINNOWS

Council Orders Ban Against Taking Minnies From Lakes.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The Ohio Conservation council today had closed state-owned lakes to the taking of minnows "for bait or other purposes."

The council's executive order on the minnow ban followed an investigation which the council said showed a shortage of foliage weeds in the lakes. Further shortage of food caused by the taking of minnows would interfere with the propagation of game fish in the lakes the council said.

SHELBY ADDS CRESTLINE

Renew Lapsed Rivalry on Nov. 4; Arrange 8-Game Card.

SHELBY — Shelby high school will renew an old football rivalry lapsed a number of years ago with Crestline next fall, Supt. C. G. Keck announced today. The game will be played at Crestline, Nov. 4, and is one of nine on the Whippets schedule.

The schedule follows: Sept. 16—at Norwalk; Sept. 23—Willard; Sept. 30—Mt. Vernon; Oct. 7—at Ashland; Oct. 14—Bucyrus. Oct. 23—Mansfield; Oct. 28—at Marion; Nov. 4—at Crestline and Nov. 11—at Galion.

NICK DOES IT THIS WAY

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Don't tell anybody, but Nick Altrock plays "hand mashie" shots out of stand traps, easy on clubs, easy on everybody—if they don't catch you." Nick snitches the ball from the ground with a quick left-handed motion. Keeping an eye on his opponent, he flicks the pellet onto the green while he whizzes his club into the sand with his right hand. "Great stuff," Says Washington's clowning baseball laugh-producer. Paul Waner is lying down on the green.

Table Tourney Opens March 4

Entry Deadline Extended to Monday Night.

The city table tennis tournament will get under way at the Y. M. C. A. Friday, March 4, according to an announcement today by Dr. D. A. Weir, chairman of the tournament. The entry deadline has been extended to Monday evening so that late entries will be included in the final drawings which will take place Tuesday of next week.

The Y. M. C. A gymnasium will be the scene of the annual paddle affair, with three tables being in action.

Twenty-four players have entered the singles division, which was won last year by Bob Ellison, who will not defend his title this year as he is out of the city.

Four teams have entered the doubles division, although many others are expected. Dr. Weir and Dr. Clarence Hien are the present title holders.

In consolation games, Holmes Liberty defeated Whetstone, 27 to 25, and Tiro beat Lykens, 47 to 22 Holmes Liberty and Tiro meet in the consolation finals Saturday night.

ASHLAND BEATS KENYON

Scores 39-35 Win to Register Third Conference Victory.

Ashland college scored its third Ohio conference cage victory of the season last night by beating Kenyon 39 to 35. On the sad end of a 27-20 half-time count, Ashland's basketeers returned to hold the invaders scoreless for eight minutes and tie the score, then broke through the Gambier defense to snare the laurels.

STAGING ONE-MAN SHOW

Frascella, Wooster Ace has Averaged 24 Points Per Game.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—It looks like only confinement to a strait-jacket can prevent Nick Frascella, Wooster's senior forward, from making a one-man show of the Ohio conference basketball scoring carnival.

The Wooster sharpshooter has scored 249 points in 10 conference games for an average of 24.9.

Drops Marion Off Schedule

Madison Seeks Another Game To Fill Card.

Madison high school needs one more game to complete its 1938 football schedule, Coach Al Fendrick announced today.

The Sept. 30 game tentatively scheduled with Marion is definitely off, according to Fendrick, as the N. C. O. conference school refused to sign a two-year home-and-home agreement. Marion demanded that both games be played at Marion.

Madison officials were willing to play in Marion next fall, but refused to return there again next year due to the lack of home games on the 1939 card.

Rather than weaken their home schedule for 1939, Madison authorities called off negotiations with Marion, and are now seeking to replace the Presidents with another strong foe.

TACKLE LEADERS

Dinger Independents Play Rex Billiards in Senior Loop.

The Dinger Independents are in an excellent spot Thursday night to toss a bomb into the championship ambitions of the league leading Rex Billiards when the two clubs tangle in the feature tilt on the Senior white league's weekly program at the Friendly House.

The Cuemen need another victory to assure themselves of at least a tie for the title. In the other games, the second place Benny Hi Notes faces the lowly Mansfield Athletic Supply quintet and the Blue Goose outfit meets the Zeigler Independents.

STOCK LEADERS YIELD IN MILD PROFIT SELLING

Wall Street Continues To Reflect Cheerier Outlook For European Peace.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market ran into mild profit selling today and leaders yielded portions of their recent advances.

Rails dipped only small amounts and utilities and oils, on the whole, were about even.

New York tended to emulate foreign securities markets where traders displayed a disposition to cash in on Wednesday's upturn. The financial district still reflected a cheerier outlook for European peace.

Bonds were somewhat mixed, along with major commodities.

In their search for trend clues brokerage quarters noted figures of the Engineering News-Record for the short Washington's birthday holiday week indicated public construction awards jumped 106 per cent above the comparable 1937 period.

Interesting to recovery proponents was the report of the international tin research and development council showing world consumption of tin last year set a record high.

DENIES CHARGE

Widow Pleads Innocent In Death of Alleged Lover.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Mrs. Margaret Humphreys, a 39-year-old widow, today pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Judge Harold L. Kime on charges of first degree murder arising from the slaying of Heston P. Phillips, 42. Police said Phillips was Mrs. Humphreys' lover.

BRADLEY FACES DAVEY IN COURT

Perjury Hearing Delayed By Defense Challenges; Start Case Saturday.

Bradley came into the room with his attorneys, Ed S. Byers and Marvin C. Harrison.

Counsel waived reading of Davey's affidavit and Harrison entered a plea of "not guilty" for Bradley, then asked Judge Addams for a continuance.

Judge Addams said the governor would be called as a state witness "with the understanding the defendant will not be bound over to the grand jury if the governor fails to return for cross-examination."

Members of the senate committee, subpoenaed to appear today, did not come to court.

Probe Highway Costs.

They remained in Columbus, ignoring the subpoenas and turned to the state highway department today for an explanation of what its counsel termed excessive paying costs.

Chairman J. Ralph Seidner declared the committee would not and could not be compelled, under the law, to appear in East Cleveland for the arraignment of Lee Bradley on a perjury charge until it had completed its inquiry.

The subpoenas demanded the appearance of the committee and its counsel, James Metzenbaum, in court at 10 a. m. today. Counsel for Gov. Davey said the writs would be withdrawn if the committee released to them a transcript of Bradley's testimony in Cleveland, which is the basis of the perjury charge.

The committee did authorize the governor's attorneys, however, to obtain a transcript of Bradley's Columbus testimony, in which he asserted Davey appealed to utilities and automobile manufacturers for campaign contributions.

Bradley was brought to East Cleveland late yesterday and released under $1,000 bond.

The committee planned to call in Earl Murray, chief statistician for the highway department today, after its counsel denounced the department's paving cost estimates and asserted "it is high time the people of Ohio awakened."

'Shocking Evidence.'

Referring to one instance in which the department increased the cost estimate of an Adams county project from $24,953 to $69,652 and then saw a contractor agree to do the work for $39,700, Metzenbaum said:

"Here is shocking evidence of how great a part estimates played in getting high bids. The sinful part is that the engineering department is primarily to blame since the estimates were set up on specious bases."

When Harry A. Sparks, highway department bituminous engineer, told the committee that the estimates were made up by Victor Waterloo, ar engineer in the bureau of location and design, Metzenbaum interrupted:

"I object to that answer, Mr. Chairman. These estimates are made up by influences far beyond the reach of these men. The buildings adjoining the state office building are the seat of government in this state, sir.

"It is the greatest razzle dazzle ever worked on a free people since Columbus is reputed to have come to America."

Metzenbaum said that bids on a Stark county highway widening project estimated at $47,615 were cancelled, "apparently because the price was not enough to satisfy the contractors," and that resurfacing was added to the plans and the original estimate increased to $79,032.

Only the General Asphalt Paving company of Canton bid the second time, the counsel said, and it got the contract at a figure identical to the estimate.

General Asphalt was a member of the Hot Mixed Bituminous Paving Industry of Ohio, Inc., whose members have received a large portion of the state's highway construction business.

Metzenbaum told also of a project in Clinton county estimated to cost $57,382. He said bids on it were cancelled in June, 1937, and the project was re-offered about three weeks later on an estimate of $80,836. He added that he found nothing to warrant the increase in price.

Martin L. Davey. He was accompanied by Police Chief L. G. Corlett, of East Cleveland, who held a warrant for his arrest, another officer of the same department and a Cleveland newspaperman.

they got few answers to their questions.

"Are you a candidate for the 1940 presidential nomination, Mr. McNutt?"

"Of course not. This is just a party of my friends."

And to the aids of the Philippine commissioner:

"Who's paying for all this?"

"It's a party given by the friends of Paul McNutt. There is a man you can go to bat for."

And so it went.

The guests filed in at 4 p. m. They were supposed to leave at 7, three hours later, but they didn't. Washington cocktail parties never end when they're supposed to. McNutt, Minton and his wife stuck it out. They were there, smiling and ready to shake hands, when they closed the Chinese room, where the reception was held.

Statistics of the McNutt party defy comparison, even in this city where debutante daughters of the wealthy "toss a party" annually that matches anything New York can offer. Hotel aids estimated the McNutt show cost about $6,000. It couldn't have cost less.

AWAIT DATA ON NEW CROP PLAN

County Farmers Expect to Get Details of Federal Program Next Week.

Information concerning the new crop control plan passed recently by congress probably will be received in Richland county within the next week, County Agent George B. Ganyard had been informed today from Washington.

Until details of the program are released, Ganyard said he will be unable to predict to what extent it will affect county farmers.

The plan calls for restrictions on corn, wheat, potato and tobacco crops to comply with the fluctuations of supply and demand. Restrictions, however, must be voted by two-thirds of the farmers in a community.

G. L. Taylor, chairman of the county soils conservation committee, and a staff of workers at the county agent's office today were compiling reports of crops produced last year by county farmers who participated in the federal program. The data will be sent to Columbus for approval by conservation officials before payments for participation will be made.

Work also has been started on the 1938 program in the county under which farmers will be paid benefits for the building of their land rather than for reducing productive acreage, Taylor said.

First benefit payments for participation in the 1937 program will be received in the county after March 1, and others will follow throughout most of the year, it was said. Approximately 1,500 farm owners have signed agreements for participation in the soils conservation plan.

County farmers were paid $86,000 last year for compliance with federal crops program requirements.

$50,000 TO FEED BRITISH ARMY

LONDON—(AP)—It costs $50,000 a day to feed the stomach the British army travels on, War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha revealed recently.

Seventeen thousand tons of meat and 25 million loaves of bread are consumed in a year at the meals, which are prepared by 2,500 cooks.

And just to make sure everything tastes all right, the cooks are sent to the army cookery school before they start dishing it out.

PLOWING BEGINS

Richland Farmers Takes Advantage of 'Open' Weather.

It will be more than two months before the planting season starts, but Richland county farmers already have begun plowing in preparation for the new crop.

Taking advantage of the "open" weather since Feb. 1, a number of farmers have plowed land for corn, helping to lighten the burden in the planting season and putting the soil in better condition, according to County Agent George B Ganyard.

Early plowed land holds moisture longer in the summer, benefitting crops in dry seasons, and tends to destroy the hiding places of insect pests, Ganyard said. In addition, the frequent freezing and thawing of land after it is plowed loosens the soil and makes it easier to cultivate late in the spring, he added

Cleveland Police Officers Lose Bribe Trial Appeal

STATE COURT REFUSES TRIO NEW HEARINGS

Tribunal Turns Down Pleas In Convictions on Bootleg 'Shakedown' Charges.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Three veteran Cleveland police officials had lost today another round in their fight to escape two to 20 year terms in the penitentiary for soliciting and accepting bribes from bootleggers during the prohibition era.

The Ohio Supreme court refused to consider yesterday the appeals of Deputy Inspector Edwin C. Burns, Capt. Michael Harwood and Lieut. John H. Nebe, all convicted as the result of an investigation by Safety Director Eliot Ness into the Cleveland police department.

Court Reversed.

In another case, the famages suit of Ray Mansperger of Zanesville against White Star cabs was sent back to the Muskingum county common pleas court. Mansperger was struck by a cab while crossing a street at a place other than an intersection and the common pleas court had directed a verdict in favor of the cab company. The appellate court reversed and remanded the case for a new trial and the supreme court refused to disturb the order.

Pauline Ramsey of Stark county will receive damages from William E. Oyler for injuries suffered in an automobile accident as a result of the court ruling that "quotient" verdicts in civil actions were valid, provided there had been no prior agreement among the jurors that the "quotient" would be the amount of the verdict.

A "quotient" verdict is one arrived at by each juror writing down the amount of damages he feels should be awarded. The adition of those amounts and the subsequent ivision of the total by the number of jurors participating.

The court further ruled that the slips of paper used by jurors in arriv'ng at a "quotient" verdict could not be used as outside evidence to abide by the result of the poll.

BLAZE HITS ASHLAND HOME

Firemen Battle Flames Two Hours; Two Families Lose Household Goods.

ASHLAND—Fire believed to have been caused by defective wiring completely gutted the double house of Garfield Sears here, Wednesday afternoon, as firemen fought two hours before finally bringing the flames under control.

According to Mrs. Loftin Hetsler, one of the tenants, she had been upstairs and was ready to go up town, when she smelled smoke, and turned in the alarm.

The Ashland fire department responded with two trucks and about 25 volunteers, but were unable to check effectively the headway which the flames had gotten.

Firemen did succeed in saving some personal goods and household belongings in the Hetsler side.

On the other side, the home of Mrs. Pearl Wise, firemen succeeded in saving most of the household goods but the fire destroyed quite a number of personal belongings. Mrs. Wise's loss was covered by insurance.

The house, according to Sears was partially covered by insurance. No estimate of the loss was given.

INFANT BURIED

ASHLAND—Short funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon for John Max Rafeld, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rafeld, who died Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., several hours after birth. Burial was made in Reedsburg cemetery.

Are You Like John Friend All 'Dragged Out?'

Every day some grateful man or woman writes us about what World's Tonic has done for him or her.

Here's the case of John C. Friend, living at 11 Reynniler St., this city. His condition is typical of a lot of you. He get up in the morning tired out—his mouth tasted bad and he had to force himself to go to work. After work he was all in—just dragged around. Doctors didn't help him. A dozen remedies failed.

He didn't know what was the matter, but when our demonstrator saw him it was evident he was full of catarrh. Catarrh means stagnation. His stomach didn't work right; his digestion didn't give him the elements he needed to be full of pep. The membranes lining his stomach and bowels are full of congestion—just stagnating.

A single bottle of World's Tonic treatment started him improving. Things began to clear up. Now Mr. Friend writes us:

"The change is wonderful. Three bottles of World's Tonic Remedy have made me a new man. I get up lively, ready for anything. My day's work doesn't tire me out, and after it I am full of energy and enjoy every minute."

Why should you drag around half dead when this good medicine may be had? Get started on it today. You can get World's Tonic Remedy at Central Drug Store (A-137) Adv.

field. Harrington asked Hunter to make the survey.

Commenting on the figures, Hunter said he thought they were worthy of "some consideration." He said he would explain that the figures are below normal, because many industrial plants in the city are not operating at night.

Figures obtained at the other three crossings are as follows:

Erie, North Diamond street, unprotected from 5:30 p. m. to 5:30 a. m.; 219 passenger cars, 10 trucks, 4 buses and 44 pedestrians.

B. & O. and Erie, North Mulberry street, unprotected from 11:30 p. m. to 5:30 a. m.; 199 passenger cars, 11 trucks, 3 buses and 67 pedestrians.

Erie, double track, North Main street, unprotected from 11:30 p. m. to 5:30 a. m.; 143 passenger cars, 17 trucks and 44 pedestrians.

The mayor said five unemployed men had been put to work making the survey, and would be paid at the prevailing street department wage of 55 cents per hour, from the street department maintenance fund.

CHANGES MIND

Townsend Reverses, Says He'll Fight to Escape Jail.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Dr. Francis E. Townsend, who came back to the capital to serve a 30 day jail sentence for contempt of a congressional committee, announced today he would appeal to the supreme court instead of going to jail.

The elderly advocate of old age pensions stepped off a train here early today with the expressed intention of serving out the jail sentence imposed by a United States district court. But after conferring with his attorney, Elisha Hanson, he issued a statement saying he would let his case go to the supreme court.

Explaining his change of attitude, Dr. Townsend said:

"The principle involved is so tremendous, however, that I feel as do hundreds of my friends that this case should be fought to a finish."

plant technician, while the third calls for the transfer of $1,500 to pay the technician's salary.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter who has appointed J. R. Turner as plant superintendent, proposes that the city re-hire James Collier of Elyria, as plant technician as recommended by the state health department because Turner lacks sewage plant experience. The opposing faction in council calls for elimination of the clause in the ordinance restricting the appointment to a resident of Mansfield. This group which includes Councilman Fred Miller, Democrat, and Councilmen James E. Crum, George C. Kyle and Russell D. Porch, Republicans, favors the employment of an experienced engineer which would do away with the necessity of a technical aid for the superintendent.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 24.

FOR MORE than two weeks I have looked for it. I went along byroads and even followed trails in my quest; vainly tried to find its sweet odor rising into the air; listened impatiently to hear the young people speak of their happy evening sitting and dancing about the booming fire.

Today I saw the sugar maples tapped,—white pails hanging against the trees; saw the blue curl of smoke rising from the sugar house; saw the farm boy with his team and sled, gathering the sap into heavy barrels, enroute to the storage vats.

I stood near the farmer as he bored a half-inch hole, about two inches deep and two feet from the ground. Into this he forced a metal spile which collected the escaping sap and conducted it into the shining containers. Often on a clear frosty morning I have heard the quick, fast-flowing, rhythmic drip drip drip for a hundred yards around me, and felt my pulse quicken at this upward surge of life . .

It is evening. The sugar house is steaming. The tanks are filled to overflowing, and all is set for a night's run. The sugar water flows into the first of a series of three to four evaporating pans, which rest on top of a huge fire box, with a chimney at the farther end. From the first pan, the sap is siphoned to each succeeding pan of heavier syrup, until it has attained the density demanded by the state.

Here each evening the youngsters of the neighborhood—and even some of the middle-aged—gather to watch the crackling fire and to taste the fresh syrup, poured into tincups of cold water.

This is the sweet wine of the forest, the stored up sunshine of our summer season, the taste that lingers like a pleasant dream.

CHANDLER MAPS CAMPAIGN FOR BARKLEY'S SEAT

He'll Be 'President's Friend' Till Roosevelt Moves to Aid Senator, Kentucky Told.

FRANKFORT, Ky.—(AP)—Gov. A. B. Chandler returned to the capital today cast in a new but not unexpected role—a candidate against Alben W. Barkley for the latter's senatorial toga in the August Democratic primary.

Making his formal announcement at a chamber of commerce dinner in Newport, Ky., last night, the governor said he would oppose President Roosevelt's senate floor leader as "President Roosevelt's friend."

Hints at Attack.

He hinted broadly, however, he would attack Mr. Roosevelt if the latter took steps to aid Senator Barkley's bid for re-election.

A letter from Mr. Roosevelt praising Barkley was read at a testimonial dinner on the eve of Barkley's announcement Jan. 24 of his candidacy for re-election.

"I am not going to run against the president of the United States—or anybody else who doesn't run," Chandler said, "and I don't think he's going to file for the office of senator."

The governor referred to Senator Barkley as "a stranger to the state" who "has given Kentucky the absent treatment" and "indicated a lack of interest in the state and its problems."

"We've got to undertake to pay the national debt and reorganize the national government," Chandler said. "We've got to cut governmental costs. We've done it in Kentucky, and now we are preparing to lead the way in Washington."

The 39-year-old veteran campaigner reached into Senator Barkley's home town of Paducah for his campaign manager, announcing he had selected McCracken county Judge Brady Stewart for that post.

For Double-Quick Cough Relief, Mix This at Home

Better Than Ready-Made Medicines. Easily Mixed.

Here's an old home remedy your mother used, but, for real results, it is still the best thing ever known for coughs that start from colds. Try it once, and you'll swear by it.

It's no trouble at all. Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments until dissolved. No cooking is needed—a child could do it.

Now put 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you a full pint of actually better cough remedy than you could buy, ready-made for four times the money. It keeps perfectly, tastes fine, and lasts a family a long time.

And there is positively nothing like it for quick action. You can feel it take hold instantly. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membranes, and helps clear the air passages. No cough remedy, at any price, could be more effective.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its prompt action on throat and bronchial membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

Williams, who will leave tonight for Columbus, serves as secretary-treasurer of the state organization and drafted the program for the two-day convention.

One of the highlights of the meeting will be an address by Henry A. Roemer of Pittsburgh, chairman of the board of directors of the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, whose topic will be "What's Ahead For Business."

The convention will be held at the Deshler-Wallick hotel. At least two members of the Mansfield chamber will attend, Williams said. They are Judge C. H. Huston, president, and James M. Hill, president otthe Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company.

Mrs Williams, who will accompany her husband to Columbus, will serve on the ladies' committee.

Jews, fearing their fate will be similar to that of Jews in Germany under the Nazi regime, sought to leave the country after the anti-Semitic offensive began with appearance of an anti-Jewish, pro-Nazi newspaper, "Volgsruf," which headlined:

"We want a free, Jewless fatherland with Christian faith and German upbringing."

Germany Takes Steps To Ease Tension.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Germany today was reported taking an active hand in the Anglo-Italian negotiations amed at easing tension in the Mediterranean and bringing about a general European appeasement.

With the British parliament still seething as a result of the resignation of former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden because of his opposition to a London-Rome deal, the London Daily Express said it understood Chancellor Hitler has agreed to the British plan for withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain.

Premier Mussolini likewise has been reported to have signified his agreement to the British proposal for removing alien fighters from the Spanish conflict as part of the gigantic bargaining game which may change the history of Europe for decades to come.

In addition, the London Daily Telegraph, in a Rome dispatch, said Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right-hand man, and German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop are expected to arrive in the Italian capital shortly to confer with Il Duce and Italian Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano on British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's plans for a settlement with Germany and Italy Goering at present is in Poland.

Britain's ambassador to Rome, the Earl of Perth, was en route to London for instructions. Following conversations with Ciano, he departed from the Italian capital raising his arm in Il Duce's Fascist salute.

As M'Nutt Breezed Into Capital

Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner of the Philippines, former governor of Indiana and possible 1940 presidential candidate, waves to hundreds of Indiana friends upon his arrival in Washington to be feted by home state Democrats and to report to President Roosevelt on Far East conditions. The national capital, according to observers, seldom saw anything like the show which the Hoosiers put on in Washington for their favorite son. More than 3,000 greeted him at a reception yesterday afternoon.

'HYPNOTIC KISS' LED TO WOES, WIVES OF 'BIGAMIST' DECLARE

SAN FRANCISCO—(INS)—A nationwide search was underway today for Jesse Ray Mowery, described as "the man with the hypnotic kiss."

Mowery is wanted on charges of grand theft and bigamy, preferred by two women here.

One of the women, Mrs. Vivian Korth, of Martinez, Cal., said she married Mowery in Ogden, Utah, in 1936; that he swindled her out of $2,000 the sale price of her restaurant. He induced her to sell the restaurant she told police, to obtain money to get him "out of trouble," with a young girl.

The other woman, Mrs. Laura Alvina Smith Mowery, of San Francisco, told police she married Mowery in Yuma, Ariz. A year ago; that he deserted her in Webster, N. Y., after taking $2,000 from her and swindling her mother of $4,000.

Mowery's "wives" declared they had heard reports he had other "wives" in New York, Ohio Michigan and Utah.

Both women declared Mowery used some sort of drug when he kissed them.

Mrs. Korth said:

"It was some sort of a powder he placed under his lip. It might have been hashish, or cocaine, or some other drug. All I know is it acted with terrifying speed and power. Almost immediately I would become weak, my knees would tremble, I would have strange desires and seem to be hypnotized."

2 Returning From Party Take Lard Sentenced To Jail

Two men charged with the theft of 110 pounds of shortening from the doorway of the Buckeye bakery, 16 West Fourth street early Monday morning, pleaded guilty to petit larceny in municipal court today.

Richard Elliott, 31, of 130 East Second street, and William Page, 61 West Arch street, both were fined $10 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail.

The men testified that they had taken the lard from the doorway and loaded it in their car while on the way home after an all-night party.

Detectives said they had recovered the baking material in a North Main street restaurant where the men had sold it.

Elliott and Page denied the theft when first brought to police headquarters, but later admitted their guilt when an employe of an adjoining establishment identified them in a police lineup.

THEATER

WHY do the movies always portray press agents as being illiterate boors? Probably for the same reason that reporters are always pictured as rumpled, unpressed individuals who get tight and tell the Boss What He Can Do. In "A Star Is Born" and "Love Is A Headache," there were glaring examples of dumb boorish press agents. Yet the actual facts are that most press agents are college men with excellent background. On Warner's lot alone, among the press men there is a college professor, a member of the Nebraska bar, a New York City attorney, a former city editor of New York Daily, a novelist who has had five novels published, and a reporter who was named by Stanley Walker as one of the ten greatest reporters of all times.

An Epical Chase.

"Wide Open Faces," which has nothing in common with the great open spaces of the west, is the title of Joe E. Brown's latest picture, a hilarious and senseless comedy, which plays the Madison Friday and Saturday. Joe is a soda jerker who becomes embroiled in a veritable convention of gangsters at an old inn which is believed to be the hiding place of thousands of dollars worth of loot, hidden there by a gangster now doing time. Gangsters' molls turn their wiles on Joe, but the Main Street boy remains true to his best girl. The climax is a mad chase in which Joe and his girl find themselves using every known type of vehicle before they actually capture the culprits. Jane Wyman, Lyda Roberti and Alison Skipworth are in the cast. The title probably refers to Joe's face.

Sweet and Hot Singers.

Allan Jones, a "sweet" singer, and Judy Garland, "hot" singer, are teamed in "Everybody Sing," a mad and tuneful story of a family of theatrical folks. Fannie Brice, who has made one or two movie appearances, comes back to the screen as the maid of the family who lives in the past because the present is too hectic. She also brings her new radio personality "Baby Snooks" to the screen. The action is plentifully dotted with new songs, sung by Jones, Miss Garland and Miss Brice, one of the most tuneful of which is "The One I Love," sung by Jones. Little Miss Garland, about the same age as Deanna Durbin, is being groomed for competition to Miss Durbin. The picture is an Ohio theater attraction.

Small Town Gossip.

Small town gossip is the motivating theme of "Scandal Street" which is booked for the Majestic for the last two days of the week. It concerns a girl who goes to a small town to work in the library and who hopes to lead a peaceful, mind-your-own-business sort of a life until her fiance returns from an extended business trip. But her good looks, her reserve all work to her undoing when the town gossips get into their proper stride, and before the girl knows how it happened, she is involved in an ugly murder. Lew Ayers and Louise Campbell are the leads, with Porter Hall, Edgar Kennedy, Elizabeth Patterson and Roscoe Karns leading the tearer-downers. The second film is a Western, Fred Scott in "Roaming Cowboy."

Love and Football.

Lew Ayers and Fred Scott have their day in Mansfield this week for these two who play leads in films at the Walnut street theater are also tops at the Ritz for tomorrow and Saturday. Scott, the singing cow hand, will be seen in "Moonlight On The Range," while Ayers is featured in a navy story in which a football theme predominates. "Hold 'Em Navy" has Mary Carlisle, John Howard, Benny Baker and Elizabeth Patterson in support of Ayers. Annapolis Military accademy is the locale, with Ayers and Howard as rivals for football honors and the hand of the same girl. A navy game provides the climax.

Auto-Truck Crashes Take Big Toll In Ohio Accidents.

(By Associated Press)

Ohio recounted today a toll of nine traffic deaths within the past 24 hours.

Two were killed in the crash of a furniture truck and light sedan near Youngstown. They were Mrs. Sophia Harvilla, 51, and Jackie Patton, 9 months.

Carrollton's first auto death in the town's history was that of Doyle Heidy, 23, of nearby Dellroy, whose auto hit a truck on a hill.

At Newton Falls, near Warren, another auto-truck crash killed the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Bricker.

Five pedestrians were killed in accidents in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Coshocton and Toledo.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1938.

Strange as it may seem, there has thus far been no apology from Maine and Vermont.

Don't get provoked at the motorist who honks his horn needlessly—feel sorry for his subnormal condition.

Now that its widely observed birthday anniversaries are over, little remains for February except to display its weather versatility.

Geography as You Like It.

AMONG other things that may be credited to the automobile is the increased interest in geography that has come about since more people have been "going places and seeing things." instead of merely reading about them.

Instead of being a dull sort of thing for study in school, a map has become the highly exciting revelation of cities and towns that are soon to be visited, with information also available regarding points of interest all along the route.

At the office of the Richland County Automobile club the supply of maps, pamphlets and various kinds of travel booklets is seldom equal to the demand, interest extending to all parts of the country at different times of the year but just now centering on points south.

Gasoline service stations may also be depended upon for state maps, or those covering a group of states, and one company invites its patrons to ask for information on any contemplated trip, which will then be completely routed to best advantage, with suggestions regarding points of special interest, eating places, hotel accommodations—in fact everything that need be known to make the trip pleasant and free from annoyances.

There might be an advantage, for instance, in looking around for another route to Florida, rather than making the straight shoot through to Jacksonville, as is so commonly done. Maybe it would be worth while to have a look at the map and a guide book.

Isolation Vs. Trade.

JAPANESE chemists are experimenting with various cellulose sources in an effort to free the country from the necessity of importing wood pulp, greatly needed for Japanese rayon and paper industries.

From Chile comes similar news. A cellulose plant has been set up at Valdivia, in southern Chile, where 8,000 acres of forest have been purchased for exploitation by up-to-date methods. The Chileans have been helped by German experts. Production on a commercial scale is expected to start within a year.

Here is chemical and industrial enterprise which may greatly benefit the countries immediately concerned but which will not be welcome news to the countries, from which the Japanese and Chileans formerly procured their pulp and cellulose.

Any country has a right to make all the things it wants instead of buying some of them from foreign lands, but is the plan sensible in the long run? Any householder has a right to stick to his well, his candles for lighting, his own land for the food he eats, and his own skill for his clothes, but he prospers more and has more of the necessaries and comforts of life by following a different system.

Better Work With Advancing Years.

ONE especially difficult thing for a young man is to look sufficiently far into his own future to get an idea of what he may be doing, how he will be situated financially and in what condition his health will be at fifty, sixty or seventy.

If something in the way of a tentative life-plan could be formulated between the ages of 21 and 25 there would very likely be fewer disappointments and failures.

For instance, a well-known Mansfield professional man who has just passed his sixty-ninth birthday anniversary, and who has been consistently careful in his habits of living, says: "I am entering my seventieth year feeling as fine and fit as I did at forty. I generally feel that I can do a better and fuller day's work than I have been able to do at any time in the past. I have in mind very strongly that I may be able to continue thus for ten years more, although this may be wishing for too much."

Mansfield has a number of notable examples of men and women who are looking forward eagerly and optimistically from seventy. It might be a good idea for more young people to learn the rules.

Work and Production.

ONE passage in Hitler's three-hour address to the Reichstag last Sunday may be of special interest to Americans. It dealt with something of more concern to our people than his plans for war and empire—the matter of making a living in difficult circumstances.

The Germans are living on a very much lower scale than we are, yet they have made some progress in the face of great obstacles. Hitler says they have done it "by substituting labor for money instead of manipulating currency."

"As [illegible] there is for us no other way [illegible] production

"[illegible] standard of living one [illegible] countries. The world [illegible] the standard of living [illegible] the desire to [illegible]

"[illegible] knowledge without great [illegible] and blood [illegible] of conquering [illegible] by methods [illegible] and of living [illegible] then I say that those who despite [illegible] are unable to solve their own unemployment problems, should keep their mouths shut."

A great majority of Americans of this and the preceding generation have become so accustomed to relatively comfortable living conditions that they have given little thought to the abject poverty existing among a large percentage of the population of many other countries, or the effort required to eke out a bare existence in such countries.

It should be kept in mind that American "standards of living" have been attained only by application of American principles of determination, initiative and industry—not by adoption of the doctrine that the world owes everyone a living and the government should deliver it.

The suggestion is offered that Japan will probably pay the Panay damages out of the sinking fund.

WHY NOT EXCHANGE OUR SURPLUSES?

Believe Mussolini Intimidated By Hitler

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Italy is not believed, by disinterested diplomatic folk in Washington, to be overly pleased by the extension of German influence into Austria.

Upon second thought, it is not quite correct to speak of any diplomatic element as disinterested relative to latest developments in central Europe. All are intensely interested, including our own state department, but the interest of some diplomatic groups is particularly immediate. Others look, rather, into the future.

These semi-disinterested diplomats, then, generally speak, pretty confidentially, of Hitler as having decidedly out-smarted Mussolini.

* * *

IL DUCE INTIMIDATED?

Il Duce, to be sure, appears to have advised Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria to submit to der Fuehrer's demand for an Austrian Nazification.

The practically unanimous verdict, however, is that Benito was, in effect, intimidated. Not that he was scared to death, but he was judicious—probably more so than he liked to be.

There is a bit of difference between the principles of Nazi-ism and Fascism. It is not so wide a difference as to be impossible to harmonize, maybe. Nevertheless, Fascism is indisposed to be assimilated into Nazi-ism. Doubtless, too, some little feeling of personal jealousy may exist between Hitler and Mussolini—not bitter enough to prevent the latter from allying himself with the former, but sufficiently so to prevent Il Duce from enjoying being wagged, as a tail, by the Fuehreristic dog.

Mussolini had to submit to it, for all that.

* * *

TOO MUCH EXPANSION?

It widely is recognized that Mussolini over-extended Italy at opposite ends of the Mediterranean.

He spent a lot of energy, men and money upon the Italian war in Ethiopia. He has not conquered Ethiopia yet, either. The aftermath of the campaign continues to be a drain upon his resources.

Then he lent a hand to support the Franco rebellion in Spain.

Germany was supposed to have been sympathetic toward this rebellion also, but the Germans did not do much. They were not overstrained by their exertions anyway. They are fresh and formidable; Italy is exhausted.

* * *

GERMANY PREPARED

Now arises this Austrian situation.

Germany is in shape to cope with it.

Italy is tired out.

Historically enmity exists between Germany and Italy.

Before the World war they were allied. But when it came to a show-down, Italy reneged. It did not join the central powers in 1914, or thereafter.

"I will never forget your treason," wrote Kaiser Wilhelm to King Victor Emmanuel. Although the kaiser is now out of the running and the king no longer signifies anything in Italy, I should imagine that German sentiment toward Italy might be somewhat the same old thing.

Listen, World!

New Lives for Old—If We Will.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THIS is the eighth day of the storm.

All night the trees have screamed.

For eight days there has been no sky or air or earth. Only a vast, churning madness of dark and light . . . . heaving, howling . . . . flinging itself back and forth before the ramming drive of wind and rain.

Solid, gray walls of rain, hurtling headlong. . . .

Blurring, blinding, battering . . .

And always the trees screaming . . . . straining at their roots, rearing, crouching and screaming . . . . screaming as horses scream.

Then in a boiling darkness which should have been dawn, there came a crash . . . . a long, wild keening . . . and the tallest pine fell, leaving a gaping emptiness of sky where it had stood.

For a hundred years, at least, the tallest pine had stood there—its huge, bronze column going up and up . . . . the peacock-blue gloom of its branches flung against the blazing brightness of the sky . . . holding the turquoise blueness of the sky in brilliant, burning flecks. And because of that deep, cool gloom, the cabin was built beneath the pine . . . . its windows curtained with shadow.

For ten years, nearly, I have loved that shadow. Found comfort in it . . . in this gigantic Sierra where there is such arrogant beauty and crashing challenge but so little comfort. Found release and relief in its circling wall—in the homey littleness that women love.

Then with the dawning, the tallest pine was gone. And there was only a wide, an endlessly wide openness where it had stood. And looking out, in the brief lull of the storm, I tasted the tears on my lips.

I was crying. I was crying because I had lost the great wall that had stood between me and the heat and the storm and the terrible loneliness of the mountains. The wall that had given me the homey littleness that women love. I was crying because I had lost the only refuge I had found since the boy went away and nothing else seemed to matter.

I was crying - hating the emptiness, rebelling against the loss of the thing I had loved.

When abruptly I stopped crying. I stopped crying in amazement. For while I had cried, the storm, unnoticed, had lulled. For a little, things stood clear. And there in the clearness, were things which I had never seen before because the tall pine had hidden them from me.

There was a long lift of mountain . . . . beautiful as a proud song . . . . shining and snow-tipped. There was a wide valley—gentle and quiet, with the red roofs of small homes showing through the trees and a brook that ran like a little boy let out of school, leaping from rock to rock. And round pads of leaves, showing through the heaped hail, where, in a short time, the spring flowers would be.

All these things I saw in the space where the tall, beloved pine had been. The soaring sky. The singing air. The swooping mountain. And a multitude of lovely little things.

I had lost a sheltering wall. But I had gained—new horizons.

And I thought how often life is like that. Shut in by some thing we love . . . . something we think we must have. Shut in—and dwarfed. Until suddenly some storm, some heart-breaking loss, tears the wall away . . . . takes the cherished possession.

And suddenly, through our tears—we glimpse new horizons—

Swooping skies and stirring challenges we had never seen or heard before—

New lives for old—

IF WE WILL!

"Meaningless Terms" Hit In Best Seller.

—By LESLIE EICHEL

FIRST we shall quote from a book which is becoming a best seller among readers on economic subjects—"The Follies of Capitalism" by Prof. Thurman W. Arnold of Yale (Yale University Press)—and then we shall quote a letter from the man who sent us the book, William Owen, of Washington.

Of "The Follies of Capitalism (now in its fourth printing), Ralph Thompson, book critic of the New York Times, said: "One of the most penetrating and exciting political studies since Veblen's 'Theory of the Leisure class'." It seems to be.

* * *

"MEANINGLESS" TERMS

Take this quotation, for instance:

"The words 'budget balancing' and 'social cost' contain all sorts of hidden polar terms. They are completely meaningless except as moving forces.

" 'Social cost' is a broader term than 'budget balancing.' The term 'cost of government' is used to prevent the government from entering into the distribution of goods. Private industry is supposed to 'cost' no one anything, unless it is engaged in some activity of which people disapprove.

"It was usual once to hear arguments about the social costs of the tobacco industry. Now it is regarded as one of the great helps along the road to recovery.

"The terms 'cost' and 'economy' are much like the terms 'efficiency' and 'inefficiency.' From the point of view of one who regards big automobiles in themselves as an unmixed blessing, the automobile industry is one of the most efficient in the world. Suppose, however, we apply to the automobile industry the standards of efficiency and inefficiency of one interested in the cheapest, safest, and most effective transportation. From this point of view, no more inefficient transportation could be imagined than the hauling of persons around in cars with hundreds of times more power and space than are needed. . . ."

* * *

"BUDGET BALANCING"

Mr. Arnold takes his fling at budget balancing mummers:

". . . . the term 'social cost' is meaningless in diagnosis. It is only useful in preaching.

"Budget balancing is the same kind of polar term. Governmental spending creates a great deal of activity. It builds concrete things such as houses, which the economist calls 'wealth.'

"The country is not poorer for each additional house which is built. Yet it is thought to be poorer in terms of budget balancing.

"The deficit financing of Germany created untold wealth in that country. Nations all over the world contributed goods, built apartment houses, roads and parks for Germany. Germany emerged from the so-called inflation which followed its governmental deficit a much richer nation in every material respect.

"The nations which sent the goods over to Germany had less goods than before they sent them. Germany had more. Yet the use of these polar terms made people believe that Germany was 'poorer' as the result of 'inflation.' The reason why they felt that Germany was poorer is that 'budget balancing' is the nice term and 'governmental deficit' is the bad term of these two polar words. Therefore, if the bad term can be applied to German deficit financing, Germany ust be worse off than it was before."

A VIEW OF HITLER

Mr. Arnold gos further with his intriguing views:

"Failure to balance the German budget is also supposed to be one of the causes contributing to the intolerant rule of Hitler and the reason why the respectable people in Germany are crushed.

"Actually, if one escapes from these polar terms, one may see that the little pieces of paper which the German middle class possessed at the end of the war were claims on organizations which had lost their morale. Such organizations had been conquered by the war. They did not have the vitality to survive because the people involved could not think in organizational terms and thus caused Germany to flounder among the welter of principles which led to action instead of inaction.

"These organizations therefore disappeared as an inefficiently managed political machine disappears, and the negotiable paper representing claims on them vanished with them.

"Political machines do not rise or fall because they balance their budget. Nor does any other form of organization. One of the reasons for the great strength of Hitler and Mussolini is the fact that they paid no attention to balancing the budget. They put people to work. They formed a cohesive organization.

"The writer is not defending either one of these two intolerant rulers. He is only pointing out the source of their strength. Having put people to work, created loyalties and morale, they became powerful in spite of all the theoretical guesses of observers caught in these polar terms."

SPENDING HERE, TOO

We find we shall have to postpone Mr. Owens' letter until tomorrow.

We shall, however, volunteer one prediction, based on our own observations, in addition to the comment we just have quoted: There will be greater governmental spending in the United States than ever before—to avoid complete collapse of the private competitive system. And, either with or without spending, there eventually will be socialization of the monopolies as well as socialization of competitive public services (such as railroads.)

No matter what form of government throughout the world, the state (government) is becoming the chief functioning power. Governments operating with deficits, as they do, in order to save people from starving, do not go "broke." In creating their new kind of wealth—housing, power systems, new planting areas, great highways—they absorb much of the old sort of wealth, based purely on profit-making. That, at least seems to be the present trend.

Hat Problem Revived.

Back in the early days of the motion picture when one went to three or four half-hour performances at a nickel a throw for an evening's entertainment, it was customary for the management to throw on the screen between reels the plaintive request—"Will the ladies kindly remove their hats?"

Time and the changing modes in feminine headgear made this plea as obsolete as the illustrated song. But now the relentless style cycle promises to make some sort of appeal to the better natures of female movie patrons inevitable.

Hats are large and growing larger. And they're larger in all dimensions. Some of them fit closely to the head but rear their crowns several inches toward the ceiling at an angle which makes neck-craning a necessity for the person seated behind the wearer. It will be interesting to see how a new generation of theater-men, to whom hats have never been a problem, meet the situation which would seem to challenge their ingenuity.—Columbus Dispatch.

Health Advice

Proper Use of Toothbrush.

—By DR. ROYAL COPELAND

In spite of the world-wide propaganda concerning the need of daily brushing of the teeth, dental decay continues to be a universal disease. Recently, a well-known dentist pointed out that faulty mouth hygiene and neglectful tooth brushing have much to do with this.

It may be astonishing to learn that tooth brushing may do no good. In fact, it may do definite harm. It is certain that the wrong kind of brushing serves no useful purpose.

Brushing the teeth from side to side and with harsh powders may irritate the teeth and gums. It fails to remove food debris. It is important that everyone be familiar with the proper use of the tooth brush. The teeth should be brushed up and down, in a slow and deliberate manner.

"The Thing" to Do.

Unfortunately, most persons brush the teeth apparently for no other reason than because it is "the thing" to do. The act is often performed in a haphazard and careless manner. Do not feel yourself that through strenuous gestures when brushing, food particles will be removed. It takes care to make certain that all foreign substances are taken away.

If any inflammation of the gums exists, or if recessions of the gums are present, it is apparent that neglect will allow the accumulation of food debris. This, in turn, will lead to tooth destruction. We must admit that in spite of all forms of energetic tooth brushing, dental decay is likely to occur sooner or later.

Give Instruction.

Precautions should be taken with the youngster who is just beginning to brush his teeth. Early instruction in tooth brushing, with proper attention to crevices and the removal of accumulated tartar, will help to insure strong and sturdy teeth. Even the temporary teeth should receive this attention. Healthy temporary teeth will insure healthy permanent teeth.

Of course, in addition to the daily hygiene of the teeth, periodic visits to the dentist are advised. Cavities and other dental defects should be attended to as soon as possible. Attention to the diet is essential. Omission of foods rich in vitamins and minerals is a hindrance to the development of strong and sturdy teeth.

Everyday Poems

—By GEORGE ELLISTON

What's Ahead?

Do you too, wonder what's ahead?
And wish that you might know?
Just all the happy things in store
And nothing of the woe?

And does it puzzle you that life
It strange and stranger grows
And this, too, makes you wish to see
What time has to disclose?

What if we knew? It would not be
The wisest thing at all:
And this I know, adventure would
Be lost beyond recall.

And we would worry over grief
Before it even came
Oh if we knew the future life
Would never be the same.

Drinking Girls Present Problem

Drinking is the most vital problem that mothers have to guard their daughters against today anonymously writes a famous writer in February Pictorial Review-Definitor. "We can shut alcohol out of the home, if we like," she says, "but we can't shut our daughters up in the home they are going out into a world where tea is passe, and cocktail parties are rampant.

"There are mothers who try to compromise by advocating the 'glass in hand' theory, the idea being that if a girl has a filled glass in her hand she doesn't feel she is spoiling the party by an appearance of primness and at the same time she isn't actually drinking. A good workable theory if the girl has character enough not to begin to start sipping.

"I know one grimly realistic New England father who started out to find out how much his college daughter could take safely, by giving her cocktails at home one evening. After a third he told her, 'Never take more than two cocktails an evening. After the third your eyes are glazed, your laugh is shrill, and you talk crazily.' That pronouncement so profoundly affected that girl that she held herself rigorously to the two cocktails he conceded, and was forever grateful to him."

McIntyre's New York Glimpses

—By O. O. McINTYRE

THERE are still a few candle-lit attic studios in Greenwich Village where the soul-hungry continue to starve for principles. Still a number of flaming zealots who have studied at Julien's and hope to get back to Boul Mich when economic skies clear.

These are the last of the modern rebels deploring commercialism and stoutly damning their fellows who succumbed to the easy go of newspaper comics or advertising illustrations. The last of the die-hards unswerving in their devoirs to art for art's sake.

Particularly do the faithful resent the spread of nut night clubs and other foody falleroos that have supplanted so many quiet waffle parlors and coffee shops. And made their world slightly honky-tonk. Now and then a rare and mellow patriarch will be found among them.

An oldster with white mustachios, goatee, corduroys and beret. He usually bears the sobriquet of Poppa and his venerable eyes glow when he comes upon some ambitious canvas that shows promise. Immediately he will beg the embryo painter to cleave to non-commercial ideals.

True story: A young man well known in New York business circles was recently given the gate from a job he held nine years, without explanation from his boss. Confused and hurt, he made the mistake of telling prospective employers that he was sacked because his boss was crazy, and was thus turned down on job after job for which he was ably qualified. On the verge of a nervous crack-up, he ran away from things and is still away, so his friends have not been able to tell him he was right. His boss did go crazy last week.

Nancy Hoyt, talented writer and sister of the equally talented poetess, Elinor Wylie, and something of a literary mad-cap, is greatly interested in bird cages although she has no interest in birds. She thinks they are somehow amusing. Not long ago she made a bird cage for a friend, a bride, and in place of the perch dangled a wedding ring through which she had drawn a well balanced sardine. Kinda hilariously goofy when you think of it!

Although there's a psycho-physiological law that with elbows on the table hands have to get busy and do something they shouldn't. Both Emily Post and Margery Wilson closed the discussion with the dictum: "Elbows on the table are all right. It seems less stiff." A spy tells me that at a recent dinner Emily Post who had her elbows so adjusted most of the time was constantly tweaking an off ear and Margery Wilson, who peddles charm and poise, was alternately twirling a note book and feeling her face.

At lunch the other day Burgess offered Peacock a slim cigarillo—the kind he keeps in a pocket in his socks. Peacock gazed in complete bewilderment. He knew of no one else who smoked thin ones. He sends to Tampa for his and Burgess gets his right around the corner. Solemnly they shook hands. The beginning of one of Webster's beautiful friendships!

'FIRST LADY' TO CLOSE PLAYERS' SEASON MAR. 29

Amy Carpenter Douglas Takes Leading Role; Cast One of Largest In Years.

For their final appearance of the season, the Mansfield Community Players will present on March 29 the brilliant play of George S Kaufman and Katherine Dayton, "First Lady," with Amy Carpenter Douglas, Cleveland, in the title role.

The announcement that the former Mansfield woman will play the leading role is particularly interesting to followers of the Players for she is still remembered as one of the most popular players ever to work with the Mansfield theater group. After going to Cleveland several years ago she became identified with the Playhouse and appeared in a number of productions there.

Her best remembered work here was as the mountain mother in Lulu Vollmer's "Sun Up." She was identified with the Community Players from their inception, playing in their first production, "Ice Bound" which was presented at the American Legion home in 1926. Later she had the leading role in "Hay Fever" and appeared in "The Cassilis Engagement."

Popular Play.

"First Lady" is one of the most popular plays of the last few seasons. The title role which is popularly supposed to have been inspired by Alice Roosevelt Longworth, was created by Jane Cowl on the legitimate stage, while Kay Francis played it in a movie version.

Helen Bacon director of the Players is working with one of the largest casts she has ever handled, as there are 21 speaking parts in the play.

Gerald Swank, who had a minor role in "Libel" earlier in the season, will play opposite Mrs Douglas, as her husband. Frances Bein who appeared in "Your Uncle Dudley" and "Petticoat Fever," is cast as Belle Hardwick. Also in the cast is Herbert Schettler who hd the leading roles in those two plays.

Margaret Tinsley, Mansfield school teacher will make her Players debut, as will Katherine Slosser in the role of the little southern belle, Emmy Paige.

It's Odd

But It's Science.

ITHACA, N. Y.—(AP)—A yellow cake of sulphur about the size of a piece of soap lies on the desk of George F. MacLeod, assistant professor of entomology at Cornell university.

The sulphur ticks like a watch.

It has been ticking for four years. That is ever since the Texas Gulf Sulphur company gave it to Dr MacLeod to see whether he could find out new things about sulphur.

The cake has to be placed to your ear to hear the ticking. The sounds are a little irregular. They make you think of a watch having difficulty to get going, of the sound of ice cracking on a night of intense, clear, still cold.

Why this sulphur ticks Dr MacLeod has not been able to learn. It probably is due to drying, he says. The cake loses a fraction of one per cent of its weight in a year.

But Dr. MacLeod has discovered several new uses for sulphur. It is not a poison. Yet he finds it will do the work of a poison in a different and very effective way. The yellow powder will keep various kinds of insect pests away from the crops they destroy. It kills some insects. Apparently it does this by the gas it generates. The gas, hydrogen sulfide, has the smell of rotten eggs.

CITIES WARNED HOUSE TRAILER NEW PROBLEM

Municipal Association Says Immediate Control Only Solution to Puzzle.

ST. LOUIS—(U.P.)—The house trailer with its nomadic following has been listd by the American Municipal association as one of the six "acute problems" confronting American cities in 1938.

Clifford W. Ham, executive secretary of the association, said the trailer problem, even though in its infancy, will demand direct, immediate and mutual attention of cities or it will get out of control.

The five other problems listed were:

1. Financing relief and adjusting to the removal of PWA as a factor in public works programs.
2. Low-cost housing.
3. Support of airports.
4. Retirement systems for municipal employes.
5. Training for public employes.

Need Expansion.

The association report said that local ordinances pertaining to house trailers should be expanded to receive the attention of municipal and state officials in the fields of health, relief, police, fire, taxation and recreation.

In 1937 more than 50 cities decided the problem, though not yet of major proportions, could not be solved simply by prohibiting trailer parking and occupancy of camps within city limits. Laws were passed to limit the staying period and others to regulate sanitation.

With building of more trailers than housing units last year, 1938 may see the problem get out of control, Ham said.

Problems relative to relief and employment were aggravated in some instances by exhaustion of PWA funds. The association said that constructive relief programs still depend on a resurvey of public revenues and an allocation of income made among levels of government on the basis of needs and responsibilities.

Housing Funds Required.

Another problem concerns low-Wagner-Steagall housing act cites in 30 states that have housing authority enabling laws are empowered to go ahead with slum clearance and low-rent housing projects. Cities in the other 18 states must await legislation. The association said that those already legally prepared to proceed must find a way to finance projects with the aid of Federal loans and grants.

Increased air traffic calls for improvements on airport facilities, now representing an investment of $300,000,000, the association pointed out. Operating expenses have also risen. To keep pace with changing conditions in air travel, cities are confronted with financing such improvements in order to benefit wth their neighbors.

Warns Trappers Against Rabies Infected Animals

CHILLICOTHE—(INS)—Don't pet that kitty! Besides not being that kind of a kitty the darned skunk might be rabid.

That was the warning given game hunters today after Health Commissioner R. E. Bower advised ten Ross county residents to take Pasteur treatments when a rabid cat owned by Mrs. C. V. Jones started picking on dogs, then attacked a skunk.

After clawing and biting its natural enemies, the cat bit four persons. The others were exposed to rabies after two dogs went on a rampage.

Dr. Bower pointed out that because Mrs. Jones' cat fought with a skunk other animals of the woods might be infected with rabies, presenting a new peril to trappers.

Antonio Stradivari, the violin maker, also made many guitars, but the only one known to bear his signature is that in the museum of the Paris Conservatory of Music.

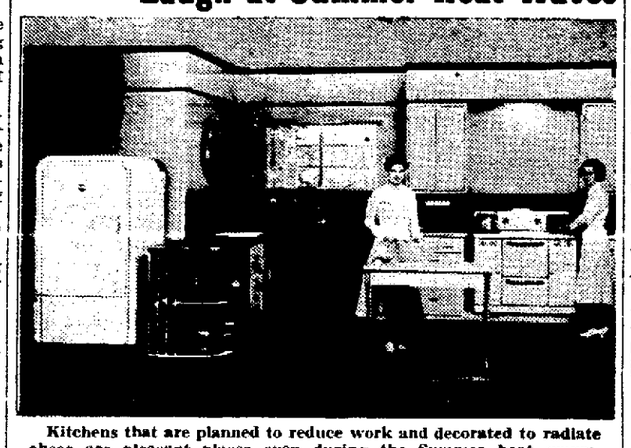
Gas IS THE MODERN FUEL — EFFICIENT, CHEAP

Modernize Your Kitchen Now—and Laugh at Summer Heat Waves



Kitchens that are planned to reduce work and decorated to radiate cheer are pleasant places even during the Summer heat waves. Note the abundant storage space in the corner of the kitchen pictured above. Many stores now sell sinks with built-in cabinets beneath, to match their stoves, refrigerators and kitchen furniture. A kitchen scientifically planned will save many steps—and many minutes—in the preparation of every meal.

NEW GAS RANGES QUICKEN PACE IN KITCHEN TASKS

The cooking appliance and the type of kitchen a housekeeper possesses gear the tempo of daily life within her home far more than she realizes, according to experts in home economics and kitchen planning.

Many a young matron with a well-planned gas-equipped kitchen appears to have mastered the element of time and the technique of cookery to the surprise of her more experienced mother who lags behind because she has not freed herself from culinary drudgery by the same modern means.

A convenient kitchen arrangement and up-to-the-minute appliances operated by gas permit the younger woman to perform her cooking tasks quickly and easily. Due to the effective operation of her range she saves herself time, steps and effort.

An out-moded kitchen always is the scene of waste motion; and although an obsolete range will cook, its lack of improvements is hampering. Yet, because her old-style range continues to cook fairly well year after year, many a homemaker is uninformed about the complete change that has taken place in modern models, and the deferred payment plan many local gas companies and dealers offer which makes the acquisition of an efficient range very easy.

A truly modern gas range with its automatic action changes the kitchen set-up surprisingly; newly designed top burners give instantaneous controlled heats in any degree demanded for various foods to cook them properly, and may be adjusted to the simmer for gentle cooking without attention during the process.

Another characteristic of the 1937 model gas range which has revolutionized cooking in millions of homes is the oven burner operated by a heat control to maintain temperatures so exact that baking can be carried on with confidence and assured results. An air-conditioned compartment insures uniformity of oven heat, and the elimination of a stagnant atmosphere so that many types of foods may be baked at the same time; such controlled heat bakes and browns each food evenly.

The insulation of oven compartments of gas ranges has improved by leaps and bounds within the last few years and risen to the position of one of the fine construction arts. Thus heat is not wasted nor distributed to the kitchen atmosphere.

Both oven and broiler burners today give a more concentrated heat source which in itself is an economy of fuel. Broiling time has been reduced considerably and the operation is both pleasant and highly satisfactory.

The variety in models of modern gas ranges is so wide that the individual housekeeper may select a type suited to her special requirements and desires, and also obtain the accessories such as automatic time clock, a minute reminder, a lamp to illumine the range top, salt and pepper shakers, warming compartment, even a heater section should she wish the range to furnish additional warmth in the kitchen during the cold season.

GAS HOUSE-HEATERS NOW LINKED TO YEAR 'ROUND AIR CONDITIONING SYSTEMS

Certain questions with regard to major equipment confront and sometimes puzzle every man planning to build or to modernize his home. What form shall his house heating system be? Can he afford to be so forward-looking as to aspire to air conditioning?

The layman is inclined to think of air conditioning as possible only for huge theaters and endowed public buildings as yet, and hesitates even to investigate such a modernism for fear it will be far too expensive for his financial resources.

Due to the marked development of all domestic gas-operated appliances within the last few years, complete gas service is available for the average man's home, according to C. George Segeler, engineer of utilization, American Gas association. In addition to the familiar comfort-producing and labor-saving automatic gas equipment such as a range, refrigerator and hot water heater, the home builder or the home-owner about to modernize now can enjoy the benefits of an automatic gas heating unit combined with winter and summer air conditioning systems.

Free Engineering Survey.

An investigation into all forms of house heating equipment is a wise precaution. Mr. Segeler points out that the home builder or modernizer may obtain a free survey of his house from the local gas company whose heating engineers will measure the dwelling for heat losses and estimate the cost of heating with gas.

Such an engineering survey is an economy measure for no one can, with accuracy, guess the cost of heating a house because many variables affect this problem. Houses are different and distinctive; one house may be insulated, another not; one may have more windows and more fireplaces; another may have a more open exposure.

Heating equipment operated by gas is the smallest in physical dimensions and affords the new home builder advantages in the matter of extra space. Clean, free from smoke, dust, ash, soot, fumes, and grime, and without moving parts, gas heating is completely automatic. It is quiet, without any mechanical noises and is labor-saving and time-releasing.

Low First Cost.

Gas, obviously the easiest fuel to control is dependable, constant in heating value, and unfailing in supply. Further, the first cost is the lowest of any automatic heating equipment.

A homeowner planning to modernize his house will find the lowest priced automatic heating equipment on the market to be a gas burner for installation in his present boiler or furnace. The difference between this low first cost and that of other fuel equipment may be profitably spent in insulation for the house, making for increased summer comfort as well as reducing the winter fuel bills.

Capable of combining winter and summer air conditioning, gas equipment gives a completely automatic heating service that no other system provides.

Air Conditioning Healthful.

The term air conditioning means preparing the air for the home by converting it from a dust and germ-laden dry stagnant atmosphere in winter to a properly humidified and circulated crystal-clear atmosphere. This insures better health, for the air breathed is humidified to the percentage considered ideal from the medical viewpoint.

By the same token, this healthful atmosphere is beneficial to the interior and furnishings of the home. Doors will not warp; veneered woods will not part; furniture joints will not separate; the house itself will neither shift, expand nor contract as under conditions of alternate dryness and moisture, common to uncontrolled atmospheric conditions.

When winter air conditioning is linked to gas house heating equipment, the temperature of air within the house can be kept at a lower level than is customarily the case with old-fashioned house heating systems.

GAS WATER HEATERS OFFER NEW ECONOMY

All home-owners desire the comfort and convenience of modern equipment but the majority must consider operating costs before a selection and purchase is made. Gas water heaters offering a controlled quality service are economizers of a new order which should be investigated."

Automatic, attention-less and trouble-free, such equipment is priced correctly for the needs of every type of family and its requirements. An important economy angle lies in the fact that modern gas water heaters use a smaller consumption of gas due to new improvements in design and additional insulation, which in itself gives maximum protection against radiation losses.

A deferred payment plan is offered by many local gas companies and their cooperating dealers; many companies have special rates for water heating which make it possible for every homeowner to equip his home with an efficient water heating system.

Every type of gas water heater identified by the seal of approval of the American Gas association is engineered to provide a family with a measured supply of hot water at a measured temperature and at a measured cost, without labor on the part of any member of a household. Or, if the homeowner so desires, the heater can furnish an ample supply of hot water at the same temperature with varying expenditures.

SYNOPSIS

Although Charlie Kilbourne is the wealthy owner of Rancho Santa Maria in San Diego county, California, he finds life dull after the death of his Spanish wife and he and Tom Castle, who had been with him in Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders in Cuba, spend much time prospecting for gold. A dynamite blast in a tunnel leading from a dry river bed uncovers a very rich lode and the old cronies spend the night celebrating the strike that is to make Tom wealthy also. The next morning they are surprised by the appearance of Kilbourne's son Murray, Don Murray as he is known, mining engineer, who has ridden out from the ranch. After reporting that all is going well at Rancho Santa Maria under an efficient foreman, he is told of the gold strike and joins in the jubilation. Murray laughingly belittles himself as a mining expert, asks for a job as cowhand and then the banter turns to which is the better shot, father or son. Castle having told Murray that his father the day before had killed a running jackrabbit with a six-gun. The elder Kilbourne points out a rock at the mouth of the tunnel as a target, goes to the shack for a six-gun as he returns his ankle turns, he falls, and the gun is discharged. To Kilbourne's horror, Castle sinks back against a tree, a hand held to his side.

CHAPTER II

"No fair—shootin'—a sittin' jack," he said. And then, the grin fading, "It wasn't your fault, partner. Dontcha think it was. I saw—saw your ankle turn. Besides, this ain't—ain't nothin' much. Shock prob'ly."

They laid him down and stripped the shirt from his breast. One glance told them the worst. The bullet had struck him just beneath the heart. An inch higher and he would never have spoken at all Now—both knew the wound must prove fatal—and soon.

And there was nothing to do.

The nearest doctor was forty miles away, across rough country. The nearest automobile . . .

"Where'd you leave your car, son?" asked Charlie Kilbourne.

"At Redondo," Murray answered, and shook his head.

"Ten miles," Kilbourne groaned "Murray—there's nothin'—"

Tom Castle spoke again, as Murray laid a hand upon his father's shoulder, seeking to comfort him for the terrible thing which had come upon him.

"Charlie," said Tom Castle, heavily, "am I—goin' out?"

"I' afraid so, Tom," said Charlie, blinking back the tears. "Tom—old man, I—"

"There's something I've got to tell you about before—before I check out," Castle interrupted him. "It's important, Charlie—important—now. Now that we've struck it rich. And besides—I've got to make an affidavit that this—this was an accident. Otherwise—the sheriff—make trouble—maybe. Better carry me to the cabin—if it won't—kill me right now."

Charlie Kilbourne consulted his son with his eyes Murray nodded. It couldn't do any harm. They lifted old Tom and carried him as gently as possible to the cabin and then laid him upon his bunk. "Any whisky?" he asked.

Murray brought the whisky, and when he had downed it Tom seemed stronger.

"Get something to write with," he said, and when this had been done, he dictated and signed a brief statement absolving Charlie Kilbourne from responsibility in the accident.

"And now," he said, when that was finished, "I want to make a will—a short one I'll have to write it myself to make it legal, I s'spose " Painfully and slowly he wrote for a while; then read what he had written.

"I, Thomas Castle, leave all my worldly possessions to my daughter, Sue Castle, if she still be alive and can be found within a period of three years; but if she is dead, or cannot be found within three years. I leave all my possessions to Murray Blake Kilbourne, son of my old partner, Charlie Kilbourne—providing said Murray Blake Kilbourne makes every possible effort to find my daughter, Sue Castle"

"But Uncle Tom," Murray objected.

"You'll try to find Sue, won't you?" asked Castle

"I will find her," vowed the young man.

"Then you don't need to be so fussy about—about being next heir. Now I'll sign this—and then—I want to tell you something." He scrawled his name on the will.

"Guess it'll hold water," he said. "Specially as I've no relatives to—try to—break it. Now—give me another shot of—that whisky—and I'll tell—"

His voice grew weaker—and there were longer spaces between his words or phrases. Charlie Kilbourne and Murray knew that they were hearing the last words their old friend was to speak, and that death would seize him before he had finished.

"I never knew you had a daughter," murmured Charlie Kilbourne. And he thought, "That's what I've never understood about old Tom; that was the part of his life that I never knew about."

"Yes," said Tom, heavily. "I had a daughter. Maybe—maybe I've still got one. It's this way. . ."

Gaspingly the story came out, each sentence more of a labor than the one before it. And at last there was a sentence which was never finished. In the middle of it Tom Castle reached toward Charlie Kilbourne — groaned — tensed—and died with his hand in his old friend's.

* * *

"It was this way, Charlie," he had said, addressing the older man, seeming to feel that his old friend and partner had a right, now, to know that which had been concealed from him. "Before—before I came back to the rancho . . . some years before . . . I got married. I was—too old, I guess. Or she was too young. Anyhow—it didn't work. I guess . . . we both tried . . . but—it didn't work. Not even after the girl came, I guess . . . that made it worse. I don't blame her . . . you understand, Charlie. She was young . . . and I wasn't so young. But she wanted her freedom . . . and Sue. So . . . I let her have it—and came to your ranch. That's a long time . . . ago, Charlie. A long time. Sue will be twenty . . . now . . . if she is still . . . living."

He had to pause now, and gather his strength for a last effort.

"But . . . she didn't treat me . . . quite right . . . about Sue. I loved—Sue. But when she was . . . about ten . they disappeared. For five years . . . I couldn't locate—them. Then I found out . . . Martha was—dead . . . and Sue . . ." Tears came to the tired eyes, and the voice was a mere whisper. "I . . . couldn't . . . find . . . Sue." There was a long silence. At last the voice continued

"I tried . . . every . . . way Detectives . . . newspapers. . . . You know . . . Charlie . . . I've been away . . . many times. That was . . . what I . . . was trying . . . to do. No use . . . no trace. Not until . . . two days . . . ago. Then the letter . . . came. The letter . . . signed . . . "A friend.' Maybe she's there. Charlie." The voice came stronger now, with hope to buoy it up. "Maybe she's there Maybe Murray can find her. Murray and you. . . . It may be different . . . now that I'm rich. Something . . . to give her . . . besides . . . love. You'll try . . . won't you. . . . Ah!" he shuddered. "And if you . . . find . . . her . . . tell . . . her . . . I . . . have always loved . . "

It was then he reached toward Charlie Kilbourne and died gripping his hand.

* * *

Rancho Santa Maria was mourning the man they all had loved.

Tom Castle now slept in the little ancient cemetery, adobe walled, behind the tiny chapel where generations of Kilbournes had worshipped—in that sacred ground where generations of Kilbournes and their retainers, white, brown and yellow, also slept

But the living must live, while the dead lie dead, wherefore Charlie Kilbourne and Murray took up again the tasks of life.

And first among those tasks was the carrying out of Tom Castle's requests

They sat together now, in the venerable library of the hacienda. A big room, lined with bookcases, with a morning sun dancing through the eastern windows Through those windows, across a great rose garden, the little chapel and the adobe walls of the burying-ground drew their eyes.

Charlie Kilbourne took a letter from his pocket—the letter Tom Castle had received just before his death. Both knew what it contained, yet he read it again, as though it might tell them more with each additional reading.

" 'Dear sir,' " he read. " 'I saw something in a newspaper and I think your daughter is in Tijuana but I don't dare give her name I mean the name she uses or mine either or tell you where she is, but I have a child too and thought you would like to know she is alright if it is the same girl. A friend.' "

He paused and tapped the letter on his hand.

"What do you think of it, or make of it, son?" he asked presently.

"Well, I don't know," replied Murray, hesitantly. "It seems to suggest a lot of things. A lot of things which need further light Looks to me, though, as one thing is certain—that a woman wrote it I don't mean the handwriting so much, but the—the tenor of it."

His father nodded assent.

"Then," continued Murray, "that being accepted, it argues that both the writer and Sue—if it is Sue—are under restraint or in danger of some sort . . . No, that isn't exactly what I mean. I mean—they are in a situation in which it would be dangerous to communicate information about . . . about . . . well, themselves or each other. I put it badly—but it's hard to put "

"I understand what you mean, son," said his father. "They are both in a situation where they have to keep their mouths shut."

Murray nodded.

"Tijuana is the place," his father continued, "where there are probably a good many people in the same fix. It seems to me that, if this girl is Sue Castle, she has fallen among evil companions But probably the writer of this is mistaken. It doesn't seem possible that Tom Castle's daughter. . . . Well, you know, Murray how whenever there's a missing person reported, he—or she—is promptly seen in a dozen different places at once. People more or less resemble each other—in some way."

"But," objected Murray, "I don't understand that the writer of this letter goes by description. I mean, that Uncle Tom ever published her description—only by name."

"You're right, at that," assented Kilbourne, Senior. "Yes, the writer of this must have something else to go on. Although again—her friend might naturally suppress her real name, and thus give rise to suspicions of all sorts. Quite possible that the writer, seeing Uncle Tom's advertisement in some paper, jumped at the conclusion that her friend was Sue Castle. But, after all, it's the only thing we have to go on. We'll keep the advertisements running, and the detective agency on the job, just as Uncle Tom did, but . . . we'll have to look into this Tijuana business."

"And all we have to go on," observed Murray, "is a short note, written by a poorly educated woman—to judge by her penmanship and spelling."

"Don't overlook the fact," warned his father, "that this may have been written by a Mexican woman, whose English would not be so good as her Spanish."

DEPICTS LIFE IN BOOM DAYS IN NORTHWEST

A novel of the boom days in the Pacific Northwest depicts the life of Dr. Jim Winforth, a doctor who keeps the oath of silence which every doctor takes never to reveal those things "in the lives of men" which are not to be spoken. Allan Hart writes of a frontier city where wealth rolled in from lumber and railroads faster than people could spend it. "In The Lives of Men" is one of the new fiction books this week at Public library.

"Babies Without Tails" is the intriguing title of Walter Duranty's books which is a collection of short stories about Russian life since the revolution. The title comes from the first story in the book which shows how a young Red soldier foils the power of an old village sorcerer who has threatened that his wife shall bear a child covered with long hair and having a tail, unless she is paid a fee to forestall such a catastrophe.

"Life and Miss Celeste" by Florence Glass Palmer is a novel which brings to fiction a new and engaging personality, Miss Celeste.

Four other books complete the fiction additions for the week. They are "Golden Carlotta" by Stebbins; "Outlaw of Eagle's Nest," Field; "Still Is The Summer Night, Derleth; and "They Who Have" by Lambert.

Variety on Non-Fiction.

Three new non-fiction books, written from the purely personal standpoint, promise to be interesting reading. Negley Farson, whose "Way Of A Transgressor" was popular, has written another. It is "Transgressor In The Tropics," and gives the reader a vivid picture of life in South America, including information about the social development of the people.

Lillian T. Mowers writes of her life as a "Journalist Wife." Edgar Ansel Mower, Paris correspondent of the Chicago Daily News when she married him, was assigned to Italy during the World war and since has covered major European events. Everywhere she has accompanied him and assisted him. From this book there emerges a picture of the world on the threshold of a new epoch.

The hanbreath escapes of a rubber planter in the Malay peninsula, make "Pahang" by Williard C. Bush an exciting book. Called "Mad Yank" by Englishmen in Singapore, this young American tried his hand as manager of a rubber plantation, and because of his courageous pioneer spirit he made good.

The new books in line with the subject of next Monday night's lecture in the Institute of International Understanding, "The Rise of Nationalism in China," are "The Far East in World Politics" by Geoffrey Francis Hudson and "The 20th Century in the Far East" by Percy Horace Braund Kent. The first is a readable account of the events of the last 100 years, explaining their bearing on the present situation. The second is a summary of recent affairs by the senior member of the English Bar practicing in China.

Other non-fiction this week includes:

"Airplane and Engine Maintenance" by Brimm and Boggess; "Drive and Live," Bayson; "Procedure Handbook of Arc Welding, Design and Practice" 5th edition; "One Hundred Masterpieces of Painting," Witt; "Violinist's Manual," Gosling; "Talking Pictures," Kresling; "Movies Come From America," Seldes; "Strategy and Tactics in Chess," Euwe; "Selected Poems," Snow; "A Letter From Pontus," Mansfield; "Collected Plays," Yeats; "Men of Concord," Thoreau; "George Washington Himself," Fitzpatrick; and "American Nicknames" by Shankle. INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 28

Deduction for Losses Other Than From Sale or Exchange of Capital Assets.

Deductions for losses are divided into four classes, and to be allowed must follow closely the wording of the income-tax law. Losses are deductible if incurred (1) in the taxpayer's trade, business, or profession; (2) in any transaction entered into for profit; (3) from fires, storms, shipwreck, or other casualties, or from theft; and (4) from wagering transactions.

Business losses result, usually, from the purchase and sale of merchandise. Such losses usually are ascertained by means of inventories, which are required whenever in the opinion of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue their use is necessary to determine the income of any taxpayer.

The term "transaction entered into for profit" means any kind of business proposition. For example, a taxpayer purchases an automobile to be used solely for business purposes, and which is sold for a loss. As this is a business proposition from start to finish, the loss is deductible, subject to the limitations of section 117. But if he had purchased the automobile to be used for pleasure or convenience, the deduction would not be allowed; it was not a transaction entered into for profit.

A loss sustained in the theft of an automobile purchased for pleasure is deductible, as it falls in class 3. If, because of faulty driving but not of "willful negligence," an automobile maintained for pleasure is damaged, the taxpayer may claim the loss sustained, as it comes within the meaning of the word "casualty." Where damages result from the faulty driving of an automobile with which the automobile of the taxpayer collides, the loss occasioned to the taxpayer is likewise deductible.

Losses from wagering transactions, whether legal or illegal, are deductible only to the extent of gains from such tranactions. The excess of such losses over the gains is not deductible.

All losses are deductible only to the extent to which they are not compensated by insurance or otherwise.

Northwestern Professor Arrested In Nazi Bund Clash

FOUR OTHERS HELD AFTER FIST FIGHT

University Official Seeks to Ask Question of Bund Leader, Turmoil Follows.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO—Five persons, including a Northwestern university professor emeritus, were under arrest today, the aftermath of a turbulent meeting of the German-American bund that broke up in a fist fight.

The disturbance occurred at the conclusion of a speech at the Germania club last night by Wilhelm Kunze of New York, the bund's director of public relations.

Faces Conduct Charge.

Dr. Eric Von Schroetter, professor emeritus of romance languages at Northwestern, was charged with disorderly conduct after an altercation with uniformed bund members who, he said, tried to eject him when he asked Kunze a question from the floor.

John Fisher, 18, and Ray Pauly, 17, declared they were set upon by bund members when they refused to give the Nazi salute They signed disorderly conduct complaints against William Wernicke, 30 who said he was a broker and who signed counter-complaints against the youths.

Camera Smashed.

Emil Horitz, one of the guards who escorted Kunze to the hall, was arrested on a charge of malicious mischief, filed by a Chicago newspaper photographer who said Horitz smashed his camera.

Dr. Von Schroetter said bund members tried to eject him when he asked the question:

"If the Nazi movement is divinely inspired, why are the churches in Germany against it?"

Defunct Railway Line's Workers Plan Own Company

LORAIN — (AP) — Employes of the defunct Lorain Street Railway company proposed today to operate their own bus company when street cars end soon their 40 years service.

They formed their own company, the Employes' Transit Lines, and drew up incorporation papers. Lorain's city council is considering the proposal. Already the employes claim to have raised $50,000.

The plan's backers point to nearby Elyria, where workers of the Cleveland and Southwestern railroad, took over city bus service ten years ago under similar circumstances, and sull are conducting it.

The organization would start service with 25 buses. Its incorporators are H. M. McHenry, C. L. Smith and Homer H. Snyder.

Two other applications are before the council. One was submitted by F. W. Coen, the railway's receiver. Another was offered by the Lorain Motor Coach company, operated by H. G. Coleman and H. J. Sanborn of Lorain, who already have a Lorain-Cleveland bus line.

CHECK CLUES IN COAST SLAYING

Police Believe iKllers Might Have Been Alcatraz Fugitives.

LOS ANGELES—(INS)—Two bandits who shot and killed Harold A. Thompson, owner of a small night club here, during a holdup Wednesday may be the Oklahoma convicts who recently escaped from Alcatraz prison in San Francisco Bay, police said today.

Officers revealed this development in the manhunt for the two robbers, revealing superficial descriptions of the two men resembled Ralph Rose, 29-year-old Oklahoma bank robber, and Theodore Cole, 23, kidnaper from the same state, who vanished from the federal prison last December.

Orders Secret Inquiry In Army Air Corps

Up and Down THE STREET

George S. Constance, Mansfield man who is in mission work in Gigante, Columbia, South America, has a back yard full of orchids—big delicate lavender blooms that clamber over the roof and over the trees. In a recent letter, with snapshots, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Constance, West Third street, the pictures show the orchid vines with 123 blooms. If these same orchids were in his back yard in Mansfield, they would be worth something like $600. Constance and his wife have been in Columbia for two years and will be there three more before returning. Their son, the only grandchild in the Constance family, will be five years old before his grandparents see him.

There's none of the drab prison atmosphere about the county jail these days. The 27 men prisoners in the first-floor cell block have organized quartets and a glee club of their own, and the deputy sheriffs say they've heard much worse music than that which floats from the cells at frequent intervals. But the singers lost their leading basso recently and are having trouble finding a voice to replace his. The basso, incidentally, was transferred to the Columbus workhouse.

"Just One Little Word" is something more than the title of a song to Service Director Tracy C. Styert—it's a headache. When a legal advertisement was drafted, asking bids for the new department car, the wording was "for a sum not less than $800" when it should have read "not more than $800." Styert is considering re-advertising for bids, lest the commonwealth think he wants a deluxe model with all the trimmings.

Sport fans of Mansfield will be given an opportunity to view the latest thing in athletics next month when donkey basketball will be introduced here for the first time. The display case in the lobby of the Public library is given over this week to an interesting display of old dolls, some of which date back to the early part of the 19th century. There are dolls with papier mache heads, which were in vogue during the first half of the century and china dolls which came into popularity the latter half. One small figure is carved of wood. Most of them had hands and feet of kid or of bisque. The collection belongs to Mrs. Guy Shawk, antique collector, South Foster street.

HOUSE GROUP TO SEEK 'TOPS' IN AERIAL POWER

Secret Probe Voted to Obtain Data on Current Strength, Status of Other Powers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Convinced the United States must maintain an air force second to none, the house military affairs committee has voted to conduct a secret, comprehensive investigation of the entire army air corps.

The committee, by unanimous vote has authorized a 13-man subcommittee headed by Rep. Dow Harter (D) of Ohio, to start the inquiry immediately for a report before congress adiourns, carrying recommendations for strengthening the army's air force in all divisions.

All sessions will be behind closed doors, members said today. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of Air Corps, and Brig Gen. H. H. Arnold, assistant chief, were scheduled to be called as the opening witnesses.

Committee Lists Requests.

The committee members were represented as seeking the following:

1. Any data the intelligence division has gathered on the air strength of other world powers.

2 If army chieftains deem present world conditions of sufficient import to warrant increasing the present authorization of 2,149 planes, a quota which the army expects to reach by 1940.

3 Advisability of congress speeding appropriations to complete the huge network of army air bases authorized under the Wilcox air base act.

4. Needs for additional maintenance depots and increased personnel.

5. Whether the army should adjust its current policy of bomber construction to permit a corresponding strengthening of the pursuit force.

6. Advisability of the army again constructing a fleet of giant dirigibles as well as increasing its present fleet of small semi-rigid air patrol ships.

The army to date has only received funds for the building of the northwest air base near Seattle although the Wilcox act calls for establishment of bases in New England, the South Atlantic area, the gulf area, the Great Lakes, Appalachian and Rocky mountain regions, Alaska, Panama and two more on the Pacific coast.

The bases would permanently house 132 planes each with a field capable of handling 1,000 ships. Members were pictured as being particularly interested in speeding action on bases authorized on both coasts, Panama and Alaska.

The Great Game of Politics

Reorganization.

THE DEBATE in the senate on the president's departmental reorganization bill, scheduled to begin in a few days, makes timely the facts about this extraordinary measure, including both its history and its contents. Altogether it is an illuminating and complicated story, to which there are so many angles that it isn't easy to present it as a whole.

Probably the outstanding thing about the scheme as now embraced in the much rewritten bill sponsored by Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, is that it will effect no economies—or, at least, none worth mentioning. In this respect the proposal is unprecedented and unique So far as known, it is the only reorganization ever proposed for either private or public enterprise which would not save money. Reorganizations, including this one, are avowedly made in the interests of "efficiency and simplification." If "efficiency and simplification" do not mean economy, then they mean nothing and something is certainly wrong at the top.

* * *

IF EFFICIENCY does not lower costs and simplification does not eliminate waste, then either the whole business is a joke or there is something extremely phony about it This would seem particularly true in the case of the federal government, which in recent years has become a veritable jungle in which even the most experienced researchers lose their way; where the waste of money is on a gigantic scale; where duplication, overlapping and cross-cutting have produced a state of confusion such as has never been known before.

* * *

YET, THE claim of economy is not even made for the administration's reorganization plan. The Brownlow committee, which drafted the original recommendation after a year's study, asserted that economy was not one of the aims of their plan and that they had not been instructed by the president to make it one. The president in transmitting them told Congress it must not expect any "large savings," and later he suggested that perhaps governmental costs might be reduced one-third of one per cent. On the other hand Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, who has made himself the recognized authority on this subject and whose resolution in January, 1936, for a departmental reorganization antedated the president's move by two months, stakes his reputation that any real reorganization will save upward of $100,000,000 a year, and declares that a reorganization that makes no real saving is no reorganization at all—which to most people will seem sense.

* * *

ACTUALLY, there is ground for the contention that Mr. Roosevelt's reorganization will increase rather than reduce governmental expenses. Certainly there is not a thing in the pending proposal to insure against that. While the president, for three years, is given power to shuffle and reshuffle the governmental agencies as to property, personnel, functions and funds; to abolish, transfer and rearrange, there is not the slightest necessity laid upon him to consolidate or supplant. And the fact that he makes no pretense of economy would seem to indicate that such abolition and consolidation will not diminish the number of jobs nor curtail expenditures.

* * *

ON THE contrary, the bill specifically provides for a considerable number of new and well-paid jobs For example, a new cabinet officer—secretary of welfare—and a new department—the department of welfare, with under secretary and assistant secretaries, etc., is created. This, however, is one of the soundest things in the bill. It will put relief of all kinds, including pensions, public health, sanitation and education, under one man It will not save any money, but it ought to lessen confusion. Then the bill also creates six "administrative secretaries" at $10,000 each, to be named by the president and "to perform such duties as the president may prescribe."

* * *

DESPITE the fact that almost no one sees the necessity for these "six selfless secretaries," as Mr. Arthur Krock calls them, and their creation seems almost certain to promote friction and bewilderment, still there likely will be little opposition to them. It is customary to give the president what he asks in the way of assistance. Mr. Roosevelt says he needs six more secretaries with a "passion for anonymity." The disposition in congress is to let him have his six additional secretaries, on the theory that, absurd as it seems, it isn't important enough to make a fight about. The real struggle will come on other features, much more far reaching.

STATE CLOSING 'RACKET' CASE

Jurors Hear of New 'Fees' In Extortion Trial of Union Leaders.

(Picture on Page 15)

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—The state's case in the extortion trial of Union Leaders Don A. Campbell and John E. McGee neared a close today following the testimony of Dean W. Rankin, local contractor, and Bror Anderson, of Moline, Ill.

Anderson, who supervised the installation of mirrors in a local department store a year ago, testified he paid $150 in a dispute with Campbell over labor involved in the installation. He testified he had been a member of the Rock Island, Ill., carpenters' union since 1912.

According to Anderson, glaziers were called to install the mirrors, and when they failed to appear, he called Campbell, who said that since the mirrors bore no union labels and were shipped here from outside the city, they would have to be resilvered by local glaziers.

As an alternative, Anderson testified, Campbell told him that he could pay $150, or the equivalent of the resilvering charge. The money was paid to a man who came to the store with four glaziers, Anderson said. An affidavit to the effect the mirrors were silvered by union graziers was introduced as testimony.

Rankin testified he paid $50 to one Tony Costello, sent to him by Campbell, in a dispute over the demolition of a glass store front prior to the remodeling of a restaurant here.

No one in the entire organization of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacting company was more pleased at the election of George H. Bucher to the presidency of the vast concern than A. E. Allen, vice president in charge of the Mansfield unit.

"I've known Mr. Bucher for more than 30 years, have worked with him for 25, and he is a familiar figure to all of us here in Mansfield," Allen said today. "He visits here frequently and is entirely familiar with the operation of the Mansfield plant. We are all delighted at his promotion to the presidency."

Bucher, (pronounced "Booker"), has been identified with Westinghouse so long that he may be said to have "grown up" with the company. He has risen, in 28 years, from a shop worker at 18 cents an hour to head of the concern, one of the two largest electrical manufacturing companies in the world.

He was born in Sunbury, Pa., and graduated from Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, where he majored in machine design and electrical engineering. His first job was with Westinghouse where, according to Bucher himself, "they hired me when they got tired of saying 'no' to my pleas for a job."

On Sept. 1, 1909 he started to work in an assembly aisle in the East Pittsburgh plant. He was employed successively as a coil winder, a worker in the transformer assembly and as a motor generator tester. At the end of the second year his wages were increased to 20 cents an hour.

His first step upward was when he was transferred as a clerk to the relatively unimportant export department, which has since become the Westinghouse Electric International company. While with this branch he played an important part in the modernizing of Japan through electrification projects.

In 1920 he was appointed assistant to the general manager of that branch and in 1922 he was elected vice president and general manager. Two years later he was president of the company, and the following year saw him as a vice president of the parent company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing. Last year he was named executive vice president and a director.

At a meeting of directors of the company in New York City yesterday, Bucher was elected to the presidency of the corporation, succeeding Frank A. Merrick, who becomes vice chairman of the board.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Richard Greene's folks back in England haven't had much in the way of letters from him yet. He has cabled, so they know he's alive and well, but letters . . . !

Here's why, and here are some of the things he may tell when he gets a breathing spell to write. They are things that can happen to any young actor who signs a contract in London for a leading role in a picture that's already under way in Hollywood.

"Dear Folks," he might write, "either Hollywood is nuts or I am I'm here—at least I think I'm here, but I'm not sure where I am. From one minute to the next, I mean.

"The trip over was fast, exciting, and set the pace for the rest of the experience. We were delayed about 24 hours by a storm at sea—a regular howler—but we docked in New York safely. Spent two hours there. Remember mainly the ripping taxis—amazingly no one was killed. At least I saw no victims in the two hours.

* * *

"Was given my script in New York Studied it on the plane, so there wasn't any time for sleep Thought I'd take a rest when the plane landed here, but the gentlemen from the studio said they were sorry, there'd be no time We were whisked off to the studio

"There I began meeting people. I remember six hours being fitted for wardrobe. Then tests. Make-up tests camera tests, sound tests. Gentleman who took charge of my face, experimenting with grease-paints . . . barbers who took charge of my hair, testing various hairlines.

"And I mustn't neglect the dentist Four hours on arrival were devoted to discovering that my teeth, which have served me satisfactorily most of my 24 years, were not quite up to Hollywood's standards. The discovery itself was made in short order. The four hours were spent in the dentist's chair, having those matters adjusted I hope the dentist enjoyed it. I didn't.

* * *

"Everybody is very nice. I'm sure I shall like Hollywood—especially when I get to see it.

"Last week-end I thought I'd get acquainted with the town and surrounding country. Bought a little car and set out for a drive. I was driving behind a long string of cars, when suddenly the leading car stopped. So did the next, and the next and the next in front of me. I kept on going. I am hopeful the repair bill will not be excessive. Also, I still hope to see the country—some day.

"Au revoir. A gentleman is approaching, and I have the feeling I am about to be whisked somewhere again. I have been too bewildered to be bewildered, but am enjoying it. I hope you'll watch for the picture. Unless they change the title, it'll be 'Four Men and a Prayer.' Whatever is on the screen opposite Loretta Young is what Hollywood has done to

"Yours truly,

"Dick."

Defunct Railway Line's Workers Plan Own Company

LORAIN — (AP) — Employes of the defunct Lorain Street Railway company proposed today to operate their own bus company when street cars end soon their 40 years service.

They formed their own company, the Employes' Transit Lines, and drew up incorporation papers. Lorain's city council is considering the proposal. Already the employes claim to have raised $50,000.

The plan's backers point to nearby Elyria, where workers of the Cleveland and Southwestern railroad, took over city bus service ten years ago under similar circumstances, and still are conducting it.

The organization would start service with 25 buses. Its incorporators are H. M. McHenry, C. L. Smith and Homer H. Snyder.

Two other applications are before the council. One was submitted by F. W. Coen, the railway's receiver. Another was offered by the Lorain Motor Coach company, operated by H. G. Coleman and H. J. Sanborn of Lorain, who already have a Lorain-Cleveland bus line.

Up and Down THE STREET

George S. Constance, Mansfield man who is in mission work in Gigante, Columbia, South America, has a back yard full of orchids—big delicate lavender blooms that clamber over the roof and over the trees. In a recent letter, with snapshots, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Constance, West Third street, the pictures show the orchid vines with 123 blooms. If these same orchids were in his back yard in Mansfield, they would be worth something like $600. Constance and his wife have been in Columbia for two years and will be there three more before returning. Their son, the only grandchild in the Constance family, will be five years old before his grandparents see him.

There's none of the drab prison atmosphere about the county jail these days. The 27 men prisoners in the first-floor cell block have organized quartets and a glee club of their own, and the deputy sheriffs say they've heard much worse music than that which floats from the cells at frequent intervals. But the singers lost their leading basso recently and are having trouble finding a voice to replace his. The basso, incidentally, was transferred to the Columbus workhouse.

"Just One Little Word" is something more than the title of a song to Service Director Tracy C. Styert—it's a headache. When a legal advertisement was drafted, asking bids for the new department car, the wording was "for a sum not less than $800" when it should have read "not more than $800." Styert is considering re-advertising for bids, lest the commonwealth think he wants a deluxe model with all the trimmings.

The display case in the lobby of the Public library is given over this week to an interesting display of old dolls, some of which date back to the early part of the 19th century. There are dolls with papier mache heads, which were in vogue during the first half of the century and china dolls which came into popularity the latter half. One small figure is carved of wood. Most of them had hands and feet of kid or of bisque. The collection belongs to Mrs. Guy Shawk, antique collector, South Foster street.

STATE CLOSING 'RACKET' CASE

Jurors Hear of New 'Fees' In Extortion Trial of Union Leaders.

(Picture on Page 15)

(By International News Service)

CLEVELAND—The state's case in the extortion trial of Union Leaders Don A. Campbell and John E. McGee neared a close today following the testimony of Dean W. Rankin, local contractor, and Bror Anderson, of Moline, Ill.

Anderson, who supervised the installation of mirrors in a local department store a year ago, testified he paid $150 in a dispute with Campbell over labor involved in the installation. He testified he had been a member of the Rock Island, Ill., carpenters' union since 1912.

According to Anderson, glaziers were called to install the mirrors, and when they failed to appear, he called Campbell, who said that since the mirrors bore no union labels and were shipped here from outside the city, they would have to be resilvered by local glaziers.

As an alternative, Anderson testified, Campbell told him that he could pay $150, or the equivalent of the resilvering charge. The money was paid to a man who came to the store with four glaziers, Anderson said. An affidavit to the effect the mirrors were silvered by union graziers was introduced as testimony.

Rankin testified he paid $50 to one Tony Costello, sent to him by Campbell, in a dispute over the demolition of a glass store front prior to the remodeling of a restaurant here.

No one in the entire organization of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacting company was more pleased at the election of George H. Bucher to the presidency of the vast concern than A. E. Allen, vice president in charge of the Mansfield unit.

"I've known Mr. Bucher for more than 30 years, have worked with him for 25, and he is a familiar figure to all of us here in Mansfield," Allen said today. "He visits here frequently and is entirely familiar with the operation of the Mansfield plant. We are all delighted at his promotion to the presidency."

Bucher, (pronounced "Booker"), has been identified with Westinghouse so long that he may be said to have "grown up" with the company. He has risen, in 28 years, from a shop worker at 18 cents an hour to head of the concern, one of the two largest electrical manufacturing companies in the world.

He was born in Sunbury, Pa., and graduated from Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, where he majored in machine design and electrical engineering. His first job was with Westinghouse where, according to Bucher himself, "they hired me when they got tired of saying 'no' to my pleas for a job."

On Sept. 1, 1909 he started to work in an assembly aisle in the East Pittsburgh plant. He was employed successively as a coil winder, a worker in the transformer assembly and as a motor generator tester. At the end of the second year his wages were increased to 20 cents an hour.

His first step upward was when he was transferred as a clerk to the relatively unimportant export department, which has since become the Westinghouse Electric International company. While with this branch he played an important part in the modernizing of Japan through electrification projects.

In 1920 he was appointed assistant to the general manager of that branch and in 1932 he was elected vice president and general manager. Two years later he was president of the company, and the following year saw him as a vice president of the parent company, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing. Last year he was named executive vice president and a director.

At a meeting of directors of the company in New York City yesterday, Bucher was elected to the presidency of the corporation, succeeding Frank A. Merrick, who becomes vice chairman of the board.

HOUSE GROUP TO SEEK 'TOPS' IN AERIAL POWER

Secret Probe Voted to Obtain Data on Current Strength, Status of Other Powers.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Convinced the United States must maintain an air force second to none, the house military affairs committee has voted to conduct a secret, comprehensive investigation of the entire army air corps.

The committee, by unanimous vote has authorized a 13-man subcommittee headed by Rep. Dow Harter (D) of Ohio, to start the inquiry immediately for a report before congress adiourns, carrying recommendations for strengthening the army's air force in all divisions.

All sessions will be behind closed doors, members said today. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of Air Corps, and Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, assistant chief, were scheduled to be called as the opening witnesses.

Committee Lists Requests.

The committee members were represented as seeking the following:

1. Any data the intelligence division has gathered on the air strength of other world powers.

2. If army chieftains deem present world conditions of sufficient import to warrant increasing the present authorization of 2,149 planes, a quota which the army expects to reach by 1940.

3. Advisability of congress speeding appropriations to complete the huge network of army air bases authorized under the Wilcox air base act.

4. Needs for additional maintenance depots and increased personnel.

5. Whether the army should adjust its current policy of bomber construction to permit a corresponding strengthening of the pursuit force.

6. Advisability of the army again constructing a fleet of giant dirigibles as well as increasing its present fleet of small semi-rigid air patrol ships.

The army to date has only received funds for the building of the northwest air base near Seattle although the Wilcox act calls for establishment of bases in New England, the South Atlantic area, the gulf area, the Great Lakes, Appalachian and Rocky mountain regions, Alaska, Panama and two more on the Pacific coast.

The bases would permanently house 132 planes each with a field capable of handling 1,000 ships. Members were pictured as being particularly interested in speeding action on bases authorized on both coasts, Panama and Alaska.

The Great Game of Politics

Reorganization.

THE DEBATE in the senate on the president's departmental reorganization bill, scheduled to begin in a few days, makes timely the facts about this extraordinary measure, including both its history and its contents. Altogether it is an illuminating and complicated story, to which there are so many angles that it isn't easy to present it as a whole.

Probably the outstanding thing about the scheme as now embraced in the much rewritten bill sponsored by Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, is that it will effect no economies—or, at least, none worth mentioning. In this respect the proposal is unprecedented and unique. So far as known, it is the only reorganization ever proposed for either private or public enterprise which would not save money. Reorganizations, including this one, are avowedly made in the interests of "efficiency and simplification." If "efficiency and simplification" do not mean economy, then they mean nothing and something is certainly wrong at the top.

* * *

IF EFFICIENCY does not lower costs and simplification does not eliminate waste, then either the whole business is a joke or there is something extremely phony about it. This would seem particularly true in the case of the federal government, which in recent years has become a veritable jungle in which even the most experienced researchers lose their way; where the waste of money is on a gigantic scale; where duplication, overlapping and cross-cutting have produced a state of confusion such as has never been known before.

* * *

YET, THE claim of economy is not even made for the administration's reorganization plan. The Brownlow committee, which drafted the original recommendation after a year's study, asserted that economy was not one of the aims of their plan and that they had not been instructed by the president to make it one. The president in transmitting them told Congress it must not expect any "large savings," and later he suggested that perhaps governmental costs might be reduced one-third of one per cent. On the other hand, Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, who has made himself the recognized authority on this subject and whose resolution in January, 1936, for a departmental reorganization antedated the president's move by two months, stakes his reputation that any real reorganization will save upward of $100,000,000 a year, and declares that a reorganization that makes no real saving is no reorganization at all—which to most people will seem sense.

* * *

ACTUALLY, there is ground for the contention that Mr. Roosevelt's reorganization will increase rather than reduce governmental expenses. Certainly there is not a thing in the pending proposal to insure against that. While the president, for three years, is given power to shuffle and reshuffle the governmental agencies as to property, personnel, functions and funds; to abolish, transfer and rearrange, there is not the slightest necessity laid upon him to consolidate or supplant. And the fact that he makes no pretense of economy would seem to indicate that such abolition and consolidation will not diminish the number of jobs nor curtail expenditures.

* * *

ON THE contrary, the bill specifically provides for a considerable number of new and well-paid jobs. For example, a new cabinet officer—secretary of welfare—and a new department—the department of welfare, with under secretary and assistant secretaries, etc., is created. This, however, is one of the soundest things in the bill. It will put relief of all kinds, including pensions, public health, sanitation and education, under one man. It will not save any money, but it ought to lessen confusion. Then the bill also creates six "administrative secretaries" at $10,000 each, to be named by the president and "to perform such duties as the president may prescribe."

* * *

DESPITE the fact that almost no one sees the necessity for these "six selfless secretaries," as Mr. Arthur Krock calls them, and their creation seems almost certain to promote friction and bewilderment, still there likely will be little opposition to them. It is customary to give the president what he asks in the way of assistance. Mr. Roosevelt says he needs six more secretaries with a "passion for anonymity." The disposition in congress is to let him have his six additional secretaries, on the theory that, absurd as it seems, it isn't important enough to make a fight about. The real struggle will come on other features, much more far reaching.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Richard Greene's folks back in England haven't had much in the way of letters from him yet. He has cabled, so they know he's alive and well, but letters . . . !

Here's why, and here are some of the things he may tell when he gets a breathing spell to write. They are things that can happen to any young actor who signs a contract in London for a leading role in a picture that's already under way in Hollywood.

"Dear Folks," he might write, "either Hollywood is nuts or I am. I'm here—at least I think I'm here, but I'm not sure where I am. From one minute to the next, I mean.

"The trip over was fast, exciting, and set the pace for the rest of the experience. We were delayed about 24 hours by a storm at sea—a regular howler—but we docked in New York safely. Spent two hours there. Remember mainly the ripping taxis—amazingly no one was killed. At least I saw no victims in the two hours.

* * *

"Was given my script in New York. Studied it on the plane, so there wasn't any time for sleep. Thought I'd take a rest when the plane landed here, but the gentlemen from the studio said they were sorry, there'd be no time. We were whisked off to the studio.

"There I began meeting people. I remember six hours being fitted for wardrobe. Then tests. Make-up tests, camera tests, sound tests. Gentleman who took charge of my face, experimenting with grease-paints . . . barbers who took charge of my hair, testing various hairlines.

"And I mustn't neglect the dentist. Four hours on arrival were devoted to discovering that my teeth, which have served me satisfactorily most of my 24 years, were not quite up to Hollywood's standards. The discovery itself was made in short order. The four hours were spent in the dentist's chair, having those matters adjusted. I hope the dentist enjoyed it. I didn't.

* * *

"Everybody is very nice. I'm sure I shall like Hollywood—especially when I get to see it.

"Last week-end I thought I'd get acquainted with the town and surrounding country. Bought a little car and set out for a drive. I was driving behind a long string of cars, when suddenly the leading car stopped. So did the next, and the next and the next in front of me. I kept on going. I am hopeful the repair bill will not be excessive. Also, I still hope to see the country—some day.

"Au revoir. A gentleman is approaching, and I have the feeling I am about to be whisked somewhere again. I have been too bewildered to be bewildered, but am enjoying it. I hope you'll watch for the picture. Unless they change the title, it'll be 'Four Men and a Prayer.' Whatever is on the screen opposite Loretta Young is what Hollywood has done to

"Yours truly,
"Dick."

A FASCINATING paper on "Early Ohio Taverns" was presented yesterday at the regular meeting of the Wednesday Study club when Mrs. Charles Conklin entertained the group. Mrs. Rex Gilbert gave the paper which dealt particularly with some of the historical old taverns of Mansfield.

The speaker told of the old Wiler House which stood on the present location of the Bird building. What is now the Southern hotel site was the North American in the early 19th century. Where Reed's store is now located there was a tavern known as Martin's and James Hedges, a Mansfield pioneer, built the tavern which was located on the site of the present Ford building.

The St. James hotel which was also known at one time as the Vonhof House and the Weldon House bore the name of one of the early settler who was a dry goods merchant.

Mrs. Burton Preston spoke on "The Wise Use of Leisure." In her paper she told how the schools are now training children in leisure time activities just as they are training them for careers. She also told of the effect of shorter working hours and the development of hobbies.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Harry Cave. The table was decorated with purple anemone. The next meeting will be March 9 with Mrs. Wallace Campbell entertaining at the Women's Club. Mrs. Edward Loughridge and Mrs. Fred Herring will be on the program.

Beach Wear

Dorothy Moore

White is always good for sports as well as for evening or any other time. A stunning long white beach robe is, therefore, just the thing for southern beaches now to wear over a bathing suit. The one worn here by Dorothy Moore, screen starlet, is made of white cotton waffle crepe and has very smart and unusual accents of royal blue on neckline and sleeves. Handsome as a beach coat, this robe also may be worn as a house coat. Dorothy wears it over a white and royal blue swim suit.

Program On "Buenos Aires" Given At Sappho Session

MEETING at the home of Mrs. William Hazeltine yesterday, members of the Sappho club heard Mrs. W. W. Wieland speak on "Buenos Aires—Paris of South America." Mrs. Wieland attempted to show how this city may grow to be the link between North and South America in future years.

She emphasized the fact that Buenos Aires is not the city of glamor that most people suppose it to be, but rather it is a "city of lights and shadows." In Buenos Aires it is possible to find both the richest and the poorest people in the world. However, the natives make every effort to present the pleasing and glamorous side of the city to visitors.

Writers, she pointed out, see both sides—the women the beautiful, the men the sordid. In keeping with the rather Spanish study theme, Mrs. Dean Eckert gave the piano selections "Praler" by Granadas and "Squillidas" by Albeniz.

For the voice selection Mrs. R. F. Cox offered "Jota" by DeFaila. The music notes on "Syncopation" were read by Miss Helen Hartmann.

Silk Jersey

Jersey silk is used for daytime costumes and for evening; for the north and the southern resorts. It is a very popular fabric this season. Here is a smart little dress in printed silk jersey appropriate for afternoon promenading, for cocktails or tea. It is in a gay Peruvian print, and is worn by Frances Haigler at Miami Beach, Fla. The popular shirtwaist styling is used for this dress in which the colorful print is enough trimming. White accessories are worn with it, and one of the heavy bead bracelets so much worn this year bands the wrist.

STUDY BIBLE

Twelve members were present yesterday at the home of Mrs. E. M. Eichin, Western avenue, for the regular meeting of the Neighborhood Bible club. After a short business meeting the group studied the Book of Genesis. The next meeting will be March 2 with Mrs. D. L. Arehart as hostess at her home, 710 West Third street.

Conversational Club Honors Member at Regular Meeting Wednesday; Personal Improvement Subject for Discussions.

AT THE REGULAR meeting of the Conversational club yesterday Mrs. Mary Thornberry was honored at a birthday party. After the program and preceding the serving of tea a large tray of gifts was carried in and presented to the honoree by Charlotte Boyd and Jackie Peirce.

The program, which dealt with personal improvement, was opened by Mrs. Merriett A. Giles, who spoke on "Your Every Day Speech and How to Improve It." In this talk Mrs. Giles pointed out that the radio is one of the greatest influences for correct speech if we but listen to the better announcers and commentators. A panel discussion was included.

Dale Carnegie's famous book, "How to Win Friends and Influence People," was reviewed by Mrs. Frank T. Wendt, and Mrs. E. M. Olin reported on "The Go-Giver" by Vash Young. Mrs. Olin, who has an autographed copy of the volume, told of the practical hints for salesmanship given in this inspirational treatise.

Gallantry of Handicapped Amazing

By VIRGINIA LEE

SOME PEOPLE have ill health, deformities, handicaps of various kinds, glass eyes, wooden legs etc., poverty, crime, unhappy homes and unbearable marital relations to break them down. And surprising as it seems, they often keep fairly cheerful and hopeful through it all. The gallantry of folk—as I have often said before in this column—constantly amazes me.

And some feel that their lives are ruined when they have to wear artificial teeth or are too fat or too thin, can't talk fluently or make friends easily. When as a girl I complained that my feet were large, mother used to say, "Be glad you are not lame, my dear."

That's the spirit, of course, and the type of person who goes about making his or her moan, and expecting everyone they know to sympathize with them, get to be awful bores.

Childhood Inhibitions.

I was moaning a bit myself the other day about folk who go "woeing" about all the time, and a friend with a knowledge of psychology said that of course people got their inhibitions from their childhood; that they might have the desire to change their conditions so as to make themselves happier, but that their inheritance from forbears and childhood habits of mind might prevent them from carrying them out. The spirit would be willing, but it also would be weak.

That seems a little hopeless and not altogether true. I believe we all can cultivate a cheerful point of view, and train ourselves to see that there is a bright as well as a dark side to everything. There wouldn't be much use in writing a column of advice to people who couldn't possibly change the conditions under which they are living, or rise above their troubles and make the best of them. Fortunate indeed is the child whose parents are honest, truthful, cheerful courageous and self-reliant, and who teach their children to be the same. But a young person can see wherein their own bringing up is at fault and train themselves in these virtues. Although I must admit that it is much harder to do so than if they came naturally in the home.

* * *

K.: You did not enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope for a personal answer. However, I do not know of any lonely boys that you could write to. I think the best thing to do is to go out with your girl friends, and sooner or later you will meet other boys and have another friend with whom to go.

WORRIED JANE'S boy friend spanked her because she threw a glass of water over him. She is an only child and he told her several times she is badly spoiled. She thinks he should apologize for the spanking.

Are you ready to apologize for throwing the water over him, Jane? That certainly was going too far in your fun.

I think he went too far to punish you, so why not tell him you realize you shouldn't have thrown the water.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

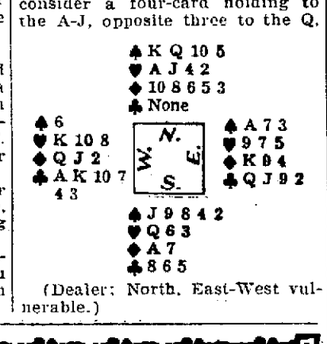
"The Authority on Authorities"

NOT AT ALL ALIKE

THOUGHTLESS players may consider a four-card holding to the A-J, opposite three to the Q, just as good as four headed by the A-Q-J opposite three little ones. There is a far cry between them, however, if the 10 and 9 are missing. When the three honors are in the same hand, it is possible to take all tricks in the suit, but utterly impossible if the combination is split.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

At two tables in a duplicate tournament, the South players landed in a contract of 5-Spades, doubled by East and redoubled by North. It was set at one table, two tricks, and made at the other.

The club K was led, which was ruffed at table 1 with the spade K. The spade Q was led, which East won with the A and returned the club Q. This was trumped with dummy's spade 10 and the spade 5 led to South's J. The heart Q was the next lead. West covered with the K and dummy with the A. The J was then cashed and a low heart lost to West with the 10. A club was returned, which South won. The spades 9 and 8 were cashed and the diamond A, but the last two tricks had to be given up.

Harold C. Richard of New York, the other declarer, managed the hand quite differently. After winning the club K lead with the spade K, he led a diamond to his A and then offered his losing diamond. East won and returned a club. This was won in the dummy and a third diamond led. In this way, Mr. Richard set up two diamonds for discards, and so made his contract.

RITTER'S

HOROSCOPE

For Friday, February 25.

ACCORDING TO the very lively activities of major planets, this should be an eventful and memorable day, with romance and high adventure looming large. There are auguries of suddenly precipitated affairs in both business and private life, with writings, speech, travel and change of a pleasant and far-reaching nature.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year of sudden surprises, with decided change in the environs and interests. These may affect the private as well as business life, as much speech, writing, contracts and travel are possible.

A child born on this day may have much originality and ingenuity, with fine creative ability in writing, speaking, science and invention. It may be gay, witty and popular, with romance and adventure dominating its life. It may travel far from the land of its birth.

Today's Recipes.

LEMON-CREAM DOUGHNUTS —Six egg yolks, one cup sugar, two tablespoons lemon juice plus irradiated evaporated milk to make one cup, one teaspoon grated lemon rind, four and one-half cups cake flour, or four cups family flour, one and one-half teaspoons soda, one and one-half teaspoons cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Gradually add the sugar, beating while adding. Add the irradiated evaported milk and lemon juice. Sift the dry ingredients together and add them to the first mixture. Place in the refrigerator for five hours. Roll out one-fourth inch thick and cut. Fry in deep fat (365 F.) This makes three and one-half dozen doughnuts, two and one-half inches in diameter.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Miss Whitlock and I smiled at Mary indulgently as she exclaimed in ecstatic speech over the kitchenette cleverly designed as a colonial bookcase and cupboards below, which Mrs. Pell, the housekeeper at the Hotel Lansfield, was showing us.

But I knew that my indulgence masked my own keen interest in the contraption, and I guessed that Miss Whitlock was equally intrigued by the device. I never had seen anything quite like it before, although I was familiar with many types of kitchenettes. And I knew that the interest of all of us in the cleverly-designed kitchen workshop was its appeal to the "playing house" instinct, born in almost every girl child and never wholly eradicated, no matter how engrossing their work outside their homes may be, or how much they may pride themselves upon their sophistication.

Mary Wants Job.

"I thought you'd like it," Mrs. Pell said, smiling at Mary's dictum that she would take it away "only over my dead body." "You see there is plenty of room at the side of the grill for your few pots and pans. There are some small concealed drawers for silver here," she indicated them, "and you can keep your china in the bookcase. I can have inside curtains made for the glass doors which will effectually screen the china, if you wish."

"Oh! please let me do that!" Mary pleaded. "I've evolved a perfectly scrumptious color scheme while I've been standing here. And I'll promise it won't interfere with your decorative scheme here."

"You are free to do whatever you like here," Mrs. Pell said. "I had the refrigerator connected when I heard you were coming. It is cold enough now to hold anything you wish."

Room For Nurse.

"We'll go shopping after a while and lay in a supply of things that need to be kept cold," Mary declared, and Mrs. Pell turned to me.

"Is there anything else you'd like to know, or anything you want me to bring you?" she asked, and I realized that she must have duties awaiting her which were being delayed by this extended colloquy.

"There's only one thing more on my mind," I said, "and that is the problem of a room and bath for Miss Whitlock on this floor."

I wondered if I imagined it, or was her face suddenly veiled with the wariness of a subordinate employe who has been warned to answer only such questions as fall within her ordinary routine.

"There's only one person who can answer that question," she said, "and that is Mr. Milner. But I can assure you that if he does assign a suite to your friend it will be all ready for her within 10 minutes after I am notified to get it ready."

Luggage Arrives.

"I can well believe that," I said smiling, and with sincerity. "And now I mustn't keep you longer. I will get in touch with Mr. Milner at once."

A deferential knock on the door punctuated my sentence. The hotel grape vine had sounded a signal of all clear, for, when I opened the door, there greeted me three bell boys laden with luggage.

I showed them where to put the bags, tipped them adequately, dismissed them and then, going to the telephone, asked to be connected with the manager.

"I should like to see you at your earliest convenience, Mr. Milner," I said. "I want to arrange for rooms for my guest, Miss Whitlock, on this floor, and Mrs. Pell said that was a question you would have to answer."

"Oh! of course," he said quickly. "I shall be there immediately," and I hung up the telephone, vaguely glad that I had explained to him what I wanted, instead of waiting to "surprise" him with it and watch his reaction to the request, as I had had the impulse to do. Something told me that he would see Mrs. Pell before he came to the suite and would be made thoroughly conversant with whatever request I wished to make.

Rented Whole Floor.

But he was at our door within five minutes, bringing with him the cards for our registration. When we had finished that formality, I put to him again the question about a room and bath for Miss Whitlock upon the same floor as ours. To my surprise he hesitated oddly.

"I have unoccupied rooms upon this floor, certainly, in fact, the whole floor has been rented by Mr. Veritzen, so that no one for whom he does not vouch personally could have rooms near you. But—I was instructed that only two people, yourself and Mrs. Veritzen, would come here for this suite. Really, I could not give any of the rooms to anyone else without express permission from Mr. Veritzen."

Book of the Week

"I LIVE UNDER A BLACK SUN," by Edith Sitwell (Doubleday; $2.50).

* * *

Those who dislike English female novelists in their more self-consciously arty moods are urged not to turn up their noses at Edith Sitwell's latest, which she calls by the singularly unprepossessing title: "I Have Lived Under a Black Sun." This may be artificial, arty, and in spots affected in the extreme—some of the dialogue is quite too, too.

But it has another quality English female novelists rarely offer, which is the kind of visceral strength we usually call (mildly) gusto. Miss Sitwell is stronger in that respect than the two male writing Sitwells — Osbert and Sacheverell. She is also quite likely the finest artist of the three. These things make up for her temerity in starting a quite impossible task, and explain why she almost has succeeded.

This task is to retell the story of Jonathan Swift, capable of friendship but not of passion as Miss Sitwell's publisher so tactfully remarks, and the two women in his life—Vanessa and Stella. And to bring this story up to date. And to superimpose upon it a kind of gnarled pastoral romance which is twisted by the war. And to draw from the whole some slight philosophic meaning.

All this Miss Sitwell does manage, although sometimes it needs all her strength and rather magnificent disdain of the little neatnesses of writing to bring it off. Her Jonathan never becomes a real person, nor do his two women. But the lesser people who center around them do become real, and the characters of the romance are very real, even though Miss Sitwell makes a gardener's son and the daughter of a harlot and a thief speak at times rather like W. H. Auden.

The two stories interlock confusingly, but convincingly too. Just such insane juxtapositions are found in life and there is no denying Miss Sitwell hers. Finally, the writing is (barring occasional inconsistencies) very fine. —J. S.

Maybe This Is Why You're Constipated

Perhaps the kind of food you eat doesn't give your bowels anything to work on. Meat, potatoes and bread don't form the kind of soft, bulky mass that will help move your bowels.

If so, a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast will give you just the kind of "bulk" your intestines may need to work properly. And in addition, it contains the intestinal tonic, vitamin B$_1$, which helps to tone them. If you want to get at the cause of your trouble, eat some Kellogg's All-Bran every day—as a cereal or baked in muffins. And drink plenty of water. All-Bran is made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Time To Do Something For Dry Skin

By JULIET SHELBY

Central Press Writer on Beauty

Alice Frost

A lass with a lovely skin . .

IT HAS BEEN a long hard winter for those of us with dry skins. There's nothing that is quite as fatal to the skin as our steam heated houses. The heat seems to literally draw all the natural oil and moisture right out. English girls with peaches and cream complexions are always complaining about overheated American houses," and quite rightly so. The cold weather and wind has also added its bit toward helping to wreck our complexions.

About this time of year it's a great idea to give our skins a little high powered attention. This is the way to get a face to look more like a face and less like a bit of old parchment. A method that this department swears by is very pleasant to do, it really makes your face feel like a million, and gets you back on the dewy side in a remarkably short time.

Unfortunately the majority of American women have dry skins, and they feel uncomfortable besides looking weather beaten. Some good general corrective rules are, to drink lots of water, eat plenty of fruits and green vegetables, and try to keep in all round good physical condition. With this as a starter, the dry condition can be corrected by working on the skin from the outside.

Should Be Washed.

This type of skin really ought to be washed with soap and lukewarm water at least once a day. Work the lather well into the nose and chin, where enlarged pores are inclined to appear. Then rinse the face with warm water and dash it with cold. Cold water is about tops in astringents for the dry skin. If your skin is one that is extra sensitive and you ordinarily don't want to wash it, try using one of the superfatted or lanolin soaps, and after the washing dissolve a teaspoon of regular starch in a glass of tepid water and sponge it over your skin. This will counteract any irritating effects.

Next work a lubricating cream well into your face and neck. You can use one of your favorites, or if you like home products you can use oil of sweet almond, or concoct a cream of your own. Mix equal parts of lanolin, cocoa butter and mineral oil. Melt the lanolin and cocoa butter before adding the mineral oil. Whichever cream you use stroke it well into the skin and leave it on for a few minutes, or over night if you wish. After removing it give it the cold water again.

A drop of prepared vegetable tinting added to the water used for making soap bubbles will give them a different color and thus delight the children.

Sugar sprinkled over the tops of cookies before putting them into the oven forms a sweet crust and makes a fr her cookie.

Always make sure that an omelet is loosened from the sides of the pan before turning out. Hold omelet pan firm while slipping omelet onto platter.

While the year is yet in rompers we celebrate St. Patrick's Day. From now until Marth 20th.. all parties probably being in honor of Ireland's popular patron saint . . . we'll be seeing green, and not from envy either, but rather in the clever party goods I saw at RITTER'S today. Table cloths . . . napkins . . . favors . . . tallies . . . gay hats . . . snappers . . . centerpieces . . . and cards to carry your greetings to friends on St. Patrick's day. These dressy party makers are inexpensive and attractive . . . at RITTER'S.

Any time you stop in REED'S you can hear cheers from the yard goods department where women who prefer to fashion their own clothes can be found "Ah-ing and Oh-ing" over the grand new fabrics coming in every day. Smartest for suits and costume suits, I think, are the new wools in solid tones and plaids, made to complement each other. The colors are lovely and the two cloths make such striking combinations possible. Batistes, shantungs, and dimity run in riots of color and grand spring prints. The rayons are all crown-tested which assures the impossibility of seam-splitting. Printed piques promise to be a popular favorite. Whatever material you use . . . go splashy with color and design. Nautical figures predominate and are most attractive. My favorite is the Skinner "Tru-hu" silk in stripes, altho the regular prints are lovely, too. The striped patterns, however, are best for the classic shirtwaist frock that is enjoying such popularity and will, from all reports, carry thru till Fall at least. At REED'S, too, you'll find studs and links in color for your tailored frocks, new striking buttons to add dash to any dress, and clever little zipper pulls that give a "finished" look to your gown. In other words, REED'S is a paradise for women who would make their own, or dictate the making.
